WILL THE QUEEN'S DEATH

FOR THE LOVE

by JOHN WARD

sunday@dailystar.co.uk

PRINCE William and Prince Harry were reunited yesterday as they greeted crowds of mourners together outside Windsor Castle.

The royal brothers put their differences behind them as they were joined by wives Kate and Meghan.

It was the first time they had been seen closely together since Harry and Meghan left their royal duties and moved to the United States two years ago.

Stunned well-wishers looked on as the couples viewed floral tributes to the Queen.

A royal source said new Prince of Wales William had asked his brother and his wife to accompany him and Kate.

The source said: "The Prince of Wales invited the duke and duchess to join him and the Princess of Wales earlier."

The brothers were dressed all in black as they walked along the gates of Windsor Castle together. Meghan walked over to a section of the crowd and approached a teenager, who put her hand over her mouth in shock.

The girl then said: "Can I have a hug?" and Meghan was seen nodding, before leaning in and embracing her.

William was heard telling one well-wisher that the days following the Queen's death had been "so surreal". He said: "We all thought she was invincible."

Banita Ranow, 28, from west London, who was among the crowd, said she heard Kate tell children next to her about what her youngest son Louis had said about the Queen's death.

She said Kate told the children: "Louis said at least Grannie is with great grandpa now."

Ms Ranow said Kate was "welling up" as she spoke to the youngsters. Her mother Baljinder Ranow, 64, said of the royal reunion: "I just hope in the future they remain like that and that the brothers come together, and the families."

King Charles then delighted thousands of onlookers with an unexpected walkabout, greeting them, above, just after 6pm.

LINEKER 'SALUTE' SLAMMED

PARTY thrower Wayne Lineker is under fire for a "distasteful" tribute to the Queen as scantily clad female workers paraded about in King's Guard outfits.

The line-up of women stomped on to stage in tall black hats then saluted as the National Anthem was played at his O Beach Ibiza club.

by SIAN HEWITT

Wayne posted a video of the moment but later deleted it. It was then shared by a Twitter follower who wrote: "Nah what the hell man." Another added: "It's Wayne Lineker - he invented 'distasteful'."

MEMBERS of the Royal Family viewed floral tributes to the Queen after attending a church service for her near Balmoral yesterday.

They also met well-wishers before Princess Anne, Prince Andrew and Prince Edward walked back to Balmoral, with the route packed with people.

Five of her Majesty's grandchildren – Zara Tindall, Peter Phillips, Princesses Beatrice and Eugenie, and Lady Louise Windsor – also attended. Ross Homer, a Royal Engineer in the Army, came to Balmoral from Kinloss and said: "You could see the tears in their eyes, they looked very sad, you could see they had been crying."

Today, the Queen's coffin is expected to be taken to the Palace of Holyroodhouse in Edinburgh.

BIG HITTERS: Singer Katherine and King Charles

God Save The King set to be a chart topper

GOD Save The King could hurtle to the No1 spot in the UK charts – after royal fans rushed to pay tribute to the new King.

The first official rendition of the new national anthem was sung at St Paul's Cathedral at the end of the memorial service for the Queen on Friday.

Now classical music favourite Katherine Jenkins has been asked to record a formal version.

Music expert Dr William Cleverly said: "This is the first time in the history of a UK monarch dying that we have music that can be streamed."

"So there's every chance that it will be, and then downloaded by people."

"We could see it at No1 in the charts to see in the King's new reign."

Opera singer Katherine said she received the call while recording a simple version for BBC Radio 4 so listeners could hear how the new words would sound. The 42-year-old was doing the version in a church in Sussex.

She said she "took a moment" of silence and to pray before launching into an immediate rendition while her grief was fresh.

Katherine added: "I have only the fondest memories singing the national anthem for Her Majesty The Queen, memories I will always cherish."

"While my heart is heavy with grief, singing this, for the first time is a huge honour."

DEATH PROMPTS A

THERE was a surge in flight searches to London from the US following the death of the Queen.

In the hour of the announcement of her death flight searches saw a 49% spike compared with the previous day, according to travel startup Hopper.

It comes at a time when the British pound is weak against the dollar, making Britain an appealing tourist destination for people travelling from the United States.

MONARCH IS 'PROCLAIMED'

MUSIC: HM and Hollande

Any request Ma'am? Yes the Beatles!

EX-French President Francois Hollande said Queen Elizabeth had once asked him for a military orchestra to play the Beatles.

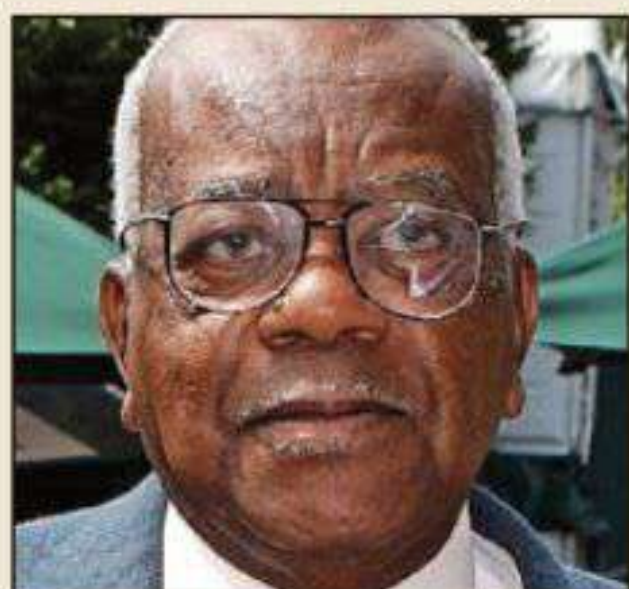

Hollande hosted the Queen in 2014 during a state visit to mark the 70th anniversary of the D-Day landings in World War Two.

He said: "She talked about being a friend of France and her taste for French culture.

"At one point, the Republican Guard was playing some classical music and I asked her what she would like and she said, 'can they play the Beatles?'

"So the orchestra played several songs by the Beatles."

He added: "That was the Queen. She could be stern ... but also she had a lot of humanity."

SIR Trevor McDonald says we are lucky to have a king who is serious about the planet.

Presenter Sir Trevor, 83, told ITV's Good Morning Britain: "We are terribly fortunate to have someone who took part in a conversation that is now universally recognised as very important about the planet in which we live."

He added: "Charles will be a great king.

"I think his profound love and respect for the job, and respect of what his mother Queen Elizabeth did, will guide him through.

"He will take a very practical approach."

King Charles III approves bank holiday for the funeral of his 'darling mama'

OFFICIAL:
King Charles signs the declaration yesterday watched by the Queen Consort and Prince William CHARLES III was formally proclaimed King yesterday as he declared the day of the Queen's funeral will be a bank holiday.

The state funeral will take place at 11am on Monday, September 19, at London's Westminster Abbey, right.

The holiday confirmation came as the King approved an order at a meeting of the Accession Council where he was officially declared head of state.

Charles became King immediately after the death of his mother Queen Elizabeth II, but the historic meeting formally confirmed his role.

Queen Consort Camilla - who the King called his "beloved wife" - and Prince William looked on as the monarch vowed to follow the Queen's "inspiring example" at the Accession Ceremony at St James' Palace, London, which was televised for the first time. Making his own declaration, the King said it was his "most sorrowful duty" to announce the death of his mother.

He said: "I know how deeply you, the entire nation, and I think I may say the whole world, sympathise with me in the irreparable loss we've all suffered.

"It is the greatest consolation to me to know the sympathy expressed by so many to my sister and brothers."

At 11am, the Principal Proclamation of the King was given by the Garter King of Arms, who said from the balcony above Friary Court: "God save the King", as history was made.

The King signed the declaration "Charles R", using an inkpot that had been given to him by sons William and Harry.

The Band of the Coldstream Guards and State Trumpeters of the Household Cavalry then played the newly-revised anthem as thousands sang along outside.

Three cheers were also given for the new monarch as the fanfare was sounded.

Smoke then filled the air as 41 guns were fired from Hyde Park and 62 at the Tower of London in a stunning salute.

There were also gun salutes across the country and beyond at Cardiff Castle, Edinburgh Castle, Gibraltar, Colchester, York, Larkhill, naval bases in Devonport and Portsmouth, and at stations at sea.

World leaders - including Russia's Vladimir Putin - sent their congratulations to the new sovereign after the ceremony.

The formalities continued during the afternoon when King Charles held a string of audiences at Buckingham Palace, including with the Archbishop of

SO CLOSE: Queen & Wills William tells of sadness over Grannie

PRINCE William has made an emotional tribute to his "Grannie". The Prince of Wales said in a statement, released by Kensington Palace: "She was by my side at my happiest moments. And she was by my side during the saddest days of my life."

"I knew this day would come but it will be some time before the reality of life without Grannie will truly feel real."

He added: "My grandmother famously said that grief was the price we pay for love."

"All of the sadness we will feel in the coming weeks will be testament to the love we felt for our extraordinary Queen."

"I will honour her memory by supporting my father, the King, in every way I can."

A LOOKALIKE of the Queen has said she is quitting the job after 34 years "out of respect".

But Mary Reynolds said she would keep her outfits in memory of a woman who "felt like part of the family".

Mary, 89, from Epping, Essex, became a lookalike in 1988 but was first told she resembled the late monarch aged 17.

She has appeared in television and film, with her standout moments including starring in the 1990 comedy film Bullseye with former James Bond actor Sir Roger Moore.

Canterbury and the PM and her Cabinet. He also met leaders of the opposition parties.

The new King had vowed to follow his "darling mama's" life of service in his first address to the nation on Friday.

The Queen's funeral is expected to see her coffin process on a gun carriage to Westminster Abbey, pulled by naval ratings - sailors - using ropes.

Senior members of the Royal Family will follow behind - just like they did for the funeral of Diana, Princess of Wales and the Duke of Edinburgh.

The service will be televised, and two minutes' silence is expected to be held. The Queen's coffin will then be taken to St George's Chapel at Windsor Castle for a televised committal service.

THE QUEEN'S bees have been informed that Her Majesty has died and King Charles III is their new boss.

The Royal beekeeper John Chapple, 79, visited the palace hives in the grounds of Buckingham Palace and Clarence House.

He said: "It is traditional when someone dies that you go to the hives and say a little prayer and put a black ribbon on the hive."

A MAN has been arrested in connection with the murder of nine-year-old Olivia Pratt-Korbel.

Merseyside Police said the 37-year-old man, from West Derby in Liverpool, was arrested on Friday night on suspicion of assisting an offender. He remains in custody.

A police spokesman said: "The investigation into Olivia's murder is ongoing. We continue to appeal for people with information to come forward to assist us in bringing those responsible to justice."

It comes after two arrests were made in West Derby in connection with the killing on Thursday. An 18-year-old man and a 29-year-old man were both arrested on suspicion of assisting an offender.

Earlier this week, Olivia's mum Cheryl Korbel, who was also hurt in the shooting, appealed for her killer to hand themselves in.

UKRAINE ON THE MARCH

Counterattack 'takes key city'

UKRAINE has punched through Russian front lines near the country's second-largest city, retaking hundreds of miles of territory.

Ukrainian forces advanced as much as 30 miles in a "surprise" attack south of Kharkiv, north-eastern Ukraine, inset.

The offensive appears to be around Izyum, long a focus on the Russian front line and the site of heavy artillery and other fighting.

The Ministry of Defence said the attack was threatening to cut off Russian supply lines, leaving them "increasingly isolated".

It said: "Russian forces were

by KARL RITTER
sunday@dailystar.co.uk

likely taken by surprise. The sector was only lightly held and Ukrainian units have captured or surrounded several towns."

It added that the nearby town of Kupiansk also appeared to be pressured by Ukrainian forces.

An image circulated on social media yesterday appeared to show Ukrainian soldiers in front of a main government building in Kupiansk, some 45 miles north of Izyum.

The image showed soldiers displaying the flag of the 92nd Separate Mechanised Battalion of Ukraine in front of a building that resembled Kupiansk's city council building, which sits just along the Oskil River.

Last night Russia's defence ministry said it was pulling back forces from the Balakliya and Izyum areas to the Donetsk region in order to defend the Donbas region.

Three held on woman hotel death

A WOMAN has been found dead at a hotel, leading to the arrests of three men.

Police rushed to the Adelphi Hotel in Liverpool city centre yesterday morning following concerns for a woman's safety.

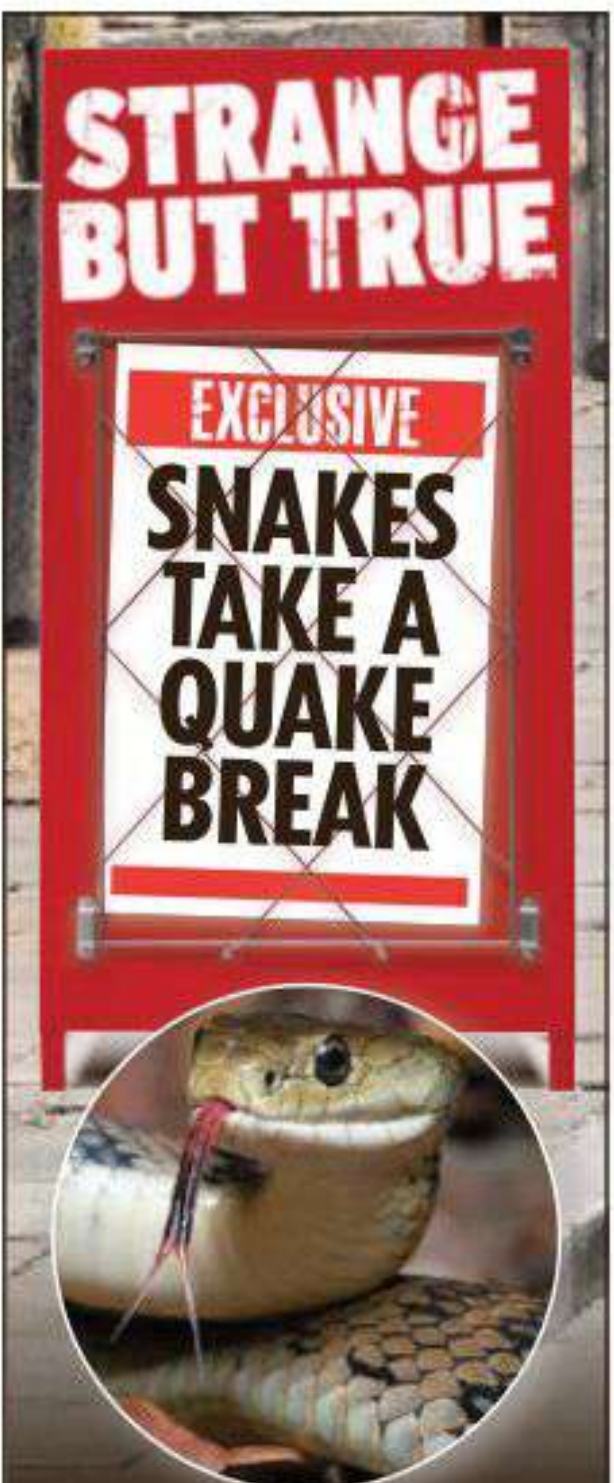

Officers found the body of a 22-year-old woman in a room at the hotel.

A 26-year-old man from Seacombe, Merseyside, a 46-year-old man from Liverpool and a 49-year-old man from Widnes, Cheshire, were arrested on suspicion of murder.

Last night detectives said they were "keeping an open mind" about the incident.

Det Chief Inspector Lynsay Armbruster said: "We are in the very early stages of the investigation, and are trying to determine the circumstances around the young woman's death."

She added: "I would appeal to anyone who was in the hotel in the early hours of this morning, who may have seen or heard anything at all, to come forward."

INHALING GAS KILLED DARIUS

Accident verdict after chloroethane use

■ TRAGIC: Darius and, right, with Will Young and Gareth Gates

POP Idol star Darius Campbell Danesh died after inhaling a gas.

A doctor's report yesterday found the singer, 41, died from "inhalation of chloroethane".

The tragedy, at his home in Rochester, Minnesota, US, was ruled an accident by the local medical examiner.

Chloroethane is a topical anaesthetic which can also be used as a recreational drug.

A statement from Darius' family said:

"The results of medical examinations have confirmed that Darius' death was an accident caused by chloroethane, which is used to treat pain and that tragically lead (sic) to respiratory arrest."

"Darius was suffering from chronic neck pain following a car accident in 2010."

The singer was found dead on August 11. Documents from the Southern Minnesota Regional Medical Examiner's Office list "toxic effects of chloroethane" as well as "suffocation" as having contributed to his death.

Darius made his first bid for fame in ITV's Popstars in 2001 before trying his luck on Pop Idol the year after. He came third, finishing behind Gareth Gates and winner Will Young.

His debut single, Colourblind, reached No1 in 2002 before he starred in West End productions of Chicago, Guys and Dolls and Gone With The Wind.

Family and close friends, including Hollywood star Gerard Butler, turned out for his funeral in Bearsden, Glasgow, on August 25.

Gerard, 52, had said he was "devastated" after the death of his "brother in arms" Darius.

The actor said Darius "had the heart of a lion and an energy so contagious he could light up a room in seconds".

FAVES: Zebedee, Dougal & Florence

IT'S TIME for bed... again, after producers announced they will be making new episodes of The Magic Roundabout.

A fresh run of the classic is to be created by a French TV team and aimed at pre-school kids.

The show, which featured characters including Zebedee, Dougal and Florence, will be "new and exciting" while "keeping the spirit and English humour" of the original.

There will be 52 new 11-minute episodes produced by Mediawan's Method Animation, the company behind The Little Prince and Robin Hood.

Producer Camille Oesch

said there is a "huge global interest" in reviving the programme.

The new series is expected to air in 2024 and will be aimed at three to five-year-olds. Camille said she hoped it would "recreate the magic of The Magic Roundabout".

She added: "We want to respect the characters, personalities and spirit of the original. It's not a question of going into the past, but of reviving this iconic work with the techniques of the present.

"The Magic Roundabout was not just an iconic programme of the 1960s, it was a cultural reference in animation, but the context today isn't the same so we have to find a path between the two."

We'll bee a Brit quirky

BRITAIN has the best traditions in the world, bar none.

Some of them are utterly bonkers, but totally charming.

Like the Queen's honey bees that have had to be officially informed of Elizabeth's passing.

Others will react with bafflement when they hear that the royal apiarist has been to the hives to announce, in hushed tones, that King Charles III is now in charge of them.

To us it's just another bit of history from our national life that sets us apart from the rest of the world.

We're not stuck in the past, however.

The proclamation of King Charles yesterday, another ancient tradition full of pomp and circumstance, was shown live on TV.

It's a sign that the royals want to be more open, which can't be bad.

And Charles is sure to want to make his mark as monarch with a programme of modernisation.

Quite right, too.

The monarchy needs a shake-up. It should not be immune from change, as all the King's subjects have to reassess their lives in the face of what could be a long and difficult crisis.

Remember, though, that the world loves our history.

And this week's tragic events look like bringing us an unexpected boom as tourists, including many big-spending Americans, head here.

No need for all our quirky traditions to be, er, throne out.

Far from harmless

IT is shocking that Darius Campbell Danesh died accidentally from inhaling something called chloroethane.

Apparently it's taken recreationally by users who want to get high.

Darius was using it to alleviate pain, it is claimed, despite the risks.

This should serve as a warning for those who take "hippy crack" and think it is a bit of harmless fun.

The actress took part in the 2km stroll yesterday.

It was her 12th Memory Walk for the Alzheimer's Society.

Vicky, 39, said: "Memory Walks hold a special place in my heart, and I always look forward to the uplifting atmosphere - and seeing lots of adorable dogs."

She added: "I've seen first-hand the challenges families go through when their loved-one has dementia, but there is help out there."

The charity is holding 25 walks across the UK over the autumn, including yesterday's event at Wollaton Hall in McClure's home city of Nottingham.

O'Grady: I'm a lot like Dr Dolittle TALKS TO ANIMALS

edward.gleave@dailystar.co.uk

PAUL O'Grady is a real-life Doctor Dolittle - and often has chats with his pets.

The presenter, 67, has more than 35 animals at his home. He said: "I've got six pigs, three goats, a load of chickens, eight barn owls, five dogs, three sheep and six alpacas."

And he revealed: "I'm always chatting to them all."

"I'm sure they understand, especially the alpacas. I say, 'How are you girls?' They give me a look and I'll say, 'Oh, it's like that, is it?' When other people are around they wonder who I'm talking to."

The telly star isn't ruling out getting more animals.

When he films his ITV series For The Love of Dogs he often meets strays and keeps agreeing to take them in.

He said: "I can't help it. I'm a sucker. I see a little dog with epilepsy and I go, 'I'll have her'. I spend a fortune on tablets for them all."

"I just like animals. So am I going to stop? Am I hell!"

For The Love of Dogs is nominated in the Factual Entertainment category at this year's National Television Awards. To vote for the gongs go to nationaltvawards.com.

'NAME'S A PAIN': Barlow Gary: I can't stand being called Gary

TAKE That star Gary Barlow has admitted he loathes his first name.

The singer griped that he reckons his moniker isn't very showbiz.

Gary, 51, said: "There were four Gary Barlows born in 1971 and I am relieved to report that I was the first.

"Not that it makes being called Gary any better. I hate my name but it's a bit late to be changing it now.

"Some names come back into fashion but there's no way on earth Gary will ever be back.

"Let's hope not, anyway. Kids should be protected from it."

In his book A Different Stage, he said that he was glad he made it big despite his old-fashioned name.

He added: "It goes to show that music is a very broad church, a wide, wide world with plenty of room for someone called Gary."

DJ Scott: Smiles are Strictly all for show 'COUPLES CLASH'

STRICTLY dancers have had to pretend they're happy with celeb partners on the hit show, it is claimed.

The professionals always look thrilled when it's revealed who they will be dancing with.

But Scott Mills claims some of them fake joy for the cameras –

The DJ, inset, was a contestant in 2014 and says he saw what really went on.

Speaking on Radio 5 Live, he said: "On my series there were some dancers who weren't happy with their celebrities. But it was never seen on screen."

Scott's co-host Chris Stark is convinced many of the reactions are faked.

He said: "One of the things that gets me is when the contestant meets the dancer for the first time and they both have to pretend that they would have chosen each other.

"The chances that every contest-

"It's the lying, going, 'You are exactly who I wanted'."

There have been clashes between pro dancers and celebs on the show over the years.

Pop legend Lulu did not get on with her partner Brendan Cole.

Presenter Fiona Phillips also clashed with Brendan.

Last year she said: "Brendan was a real bugger, actually.

"He wasn't very nice. He was really naughty." This year's series includes a string of big names including Kym Marsh, Will Mellor, Matt Goss and Helen Skelton.

More than 550 complaints have been made over the past year – many of them about the lack of availability of "hair-dressing slots".

He added: "Hairdressing salons allow prisoners to feel a bit pampered and to try out a new style."

"Both customers and workers gain immense pleasure from salons, so it is a source of great annoyance when they can't get an appointment."

BONFIRES GOING UP IN SMOKE

DARK DAYS:
Costly displays are having to be cancelled

BONFIRE Night will be a damp squib after celebrations were axed because of the cost-of-living crisis.

A string of firework shows around the country have been cancelled, with council organisers blaming rising prices and even air pollution.

Celebrations have so far been shelved in London, Dundee, Cardiff and Liverpool. Councils in other cities have yet to confirm if their annual events will go ahead.

In Hackney, east London, the local council blamed rising costs and air quality fears for its decision to cancel.

It said the annual display costs about £125,000 to run, and that last time only £72,000 was recouped in ticket sales and cash from catering.

The council also claimed the event was bad for the environment, and said fireworks emit "light, heat and sound energy along with carbon dioxide and other gases and residues".

It said there was often "a noticeable increase in pollution from particulates and dioxins" around Bonfire Night. Dundee City Council recently voted to cancel its fireworks displays. And in Cardiff the annual Sparks in the Park show will not go ahead "for the foreseeable future" because of the "escalating cost and organisational burden" of running the largest fireworks display in Wales.

The event's organisers, Cardiff Round Table, said: "As a purely volunteer-driven event, where all profits raised are donated to local charities and good causes, it is no longer feasible for us to put on an event of this scale."

Liverpool and Lewisham councils have said they will also be cancelling their fireworks events this year after originally putting them on hold during the pandemic.

The Local Government Association said: "Decisions to cancel any events are taken by individual councils based on their unique local circumstances."

STICK TO DAY JOB, HARRY

Asked what's the best thing about Don't Worry Darling, he said: "You know, my favourite thing about the movie is, like, it feels like a movie. It feels like a real, like, you know, go-to-the-theater film movie." So the best thing about the film is it's a film? Don't all rush to the cinema.

It's original spin for the son of God

SO it has been claimed that Jesus Christ was the first person ever to play cricket.

Is that why they play at Lord's?

Historians reckon the son of God wielded a bat nearly 2,000 years before the game was invented.

The details of JC's cricket spell were apparently found in a previously unseen gospel.

Maybe cricket could take a leaf out of the second coming's book. I'm stumped at why it takes a test match five days to end when Jesus was crucified, died and rose again in just three. Howzat?

The end of an error...

IT was a stormy start for new PM Liz Truss as rain delayed her first speech outside Number 10.

I was watching it unfold on the news when one reporter said: "We don't know how long this shower is going to last."

I doubt it will last as long as the last shower who inhabited the place.

Telly's game of groans fits bill

YOU just can't win sometimes – TV show This Morning came under attack because it offered to pay the cost of someone's energy bills as a prize.

Some said the Spin To Win segment of the programme made "light of the cost-of-living crisis".

The regulator Ofcom received 170 complaints about the show that day.

Who in their right mind complains to an official body about a competition giving away free money? It's madness. Undeterred by the flak, Phillip Schofield and Holly Willoughby, pictured, revealed the next day the prize would cover household bills – including "mortgage, petrol, food or energy".

Imagine if you'd won that? You too could feel like an MP who was allowed to claim all of that back on expenses.

More backlash followed and the prize was dropped entirely from the next day's competition. It's a shame. With the crisis most of the country faces this winter, having all of your bills being paid up is a fantastic thing to win. This Morning should bring it back. But I reckon other shows may need to change their format as the cost of living bites...

Homes Under The Hammer: Some unlucky sods who can't afford the mortgage watch on with Dion Dublin as their houses are repossessed and sold at auction at a knockdown price.

Countdown: The clock starts ticking as players cram in a last bit of light and heat before being forced to turn it off.

The Price Is Right: Cameras catch shoppers in supermarkets looking at items such as a tin of beans before asking: "Is this price right? Surely not."

Deal Or No Deal: Hopefuls are helped by Noel Edmonds as the Banker offers through-the-nose mortgage deals they'll never be able to pay back.

University Challenge: Amol Rajan taunts kids from poor backgrounds that they'll never be able to afford uni.

Tipping Point: Ben Shephard fronts the show where people struggling to stay afloat are financially pushed over the edge by a higher-than-expected gas bill.

Strike It Lucky: Michael Barrymore is replaced as host by union leader Mick Lynch as he challenges workers to go on strike in a bid for better pay.

Total Wipeout: Viewers watch as players see their bank accounts empty as they painfully fall at various obstacles (bills) into a pit of despair.

Nineteen-year-old chess prodigy Hans Niemann was besting the world's top player Magnus Carlsen, who decided to withdraw from the competition, but was then accused by others of cheating. Hans then said he would play 'fully naked' to prove he didn't. Naked chess? Sounds like pawn!

You have to be Joe-king

THERE was a lot of brouhaha after comic Joe Lycett was invited on to Laura Kuenssberg's politics show and mocked Liz Truss. Oh my days, a comedian making fun of politicians? How dare they?

OFF THE TOP OF MY ED

I WISH more celebs were like Harry Styles.

Every single thing he does is scrutinised by people around the world, and yet he doesn't seem to let that bother him at all.

Harry wears whatever he wants, picks interesting projects and refuses to be put in a box when it comes to his sexuality.

This week he's been at the centre of plenty of gossip about what went on while he filmed his new movie Don't Worry Darling.

But he doesn't seem bothered one bit.

Harry isn't taking it all too seriously and that's refreshing in a world full of nerry celebs who are scared to have an opinion or do anything different.

"It's also great publicity for the shops, which they could really do with at the moment."

Watch it on September 22 at 10pm on ITV2.

ALL CREATURES IRATE AND SMALL

'Tristan': I'd love to play grumpy farmer

PETER Davison is fed up he didn't get a role in the new version of All Creatures Great And Small.

The actor - who played young vet Tristan Farnon in the original series - helped make it a hit for the BBC in the 70s.

But he hasn't been asked to be part of the Channel 5 revival.

He told me: "I am probably bitter they haven't offered me a part in it as a grumpy old farmer. It might be fun to be in it. It would be full circle if it ever happened."

Peter admits he has mixed feelings about the show being revived. He said: "In your heart, you think it's a bit of a pain. You feel that by coincidence and things that happened, we created a thing that was a very popular programme."

"We were getting 18million viewers when we made it. So in a way, you don't like to see it redone."

"Ideally you think, 'That's it, we did it and it'll never be done again.'"

"But there are new viewers now and people don't want to watch things that are in the old format."

The new version launched in 2020 and quickly became a ratings smash for Channel 5. Three million viewers are expected to watch when its third series starts this week.

But Peter, left, hasn't tuned in to see any of it yet.

He said: "I have not seen an episode of it. I've heard it's very good, so me not watching it is no reflection on the programme."

"It's just that my viewing is limited to about an hour a night. Once you get through Better Call Saul and all those things, you don't get around to it. It's on the list, but it's a long list."

"But it was sad to receive so many messages from people who have been through similar things.

IT sounds like Pete Wicks is ready to quit The Only Way Is Essex after seven years.

The star isn't committing to another series of the show.

HANGOVER CURE IS A SPUDDY MARVEL

Juice 'works in 30mins'

by SIAN HEWITT

sunday@dailystar.co.uk

THE humble spud could soon be crowned the ultimate cure for a hangover.

Boffins have created a "miracle" potato milk drink said to help ease the after-effects of a boozy night in just 30 minutes.

The discovery was made by inventors who created a liquid comprising raw potato juice, spring water and seaweed.

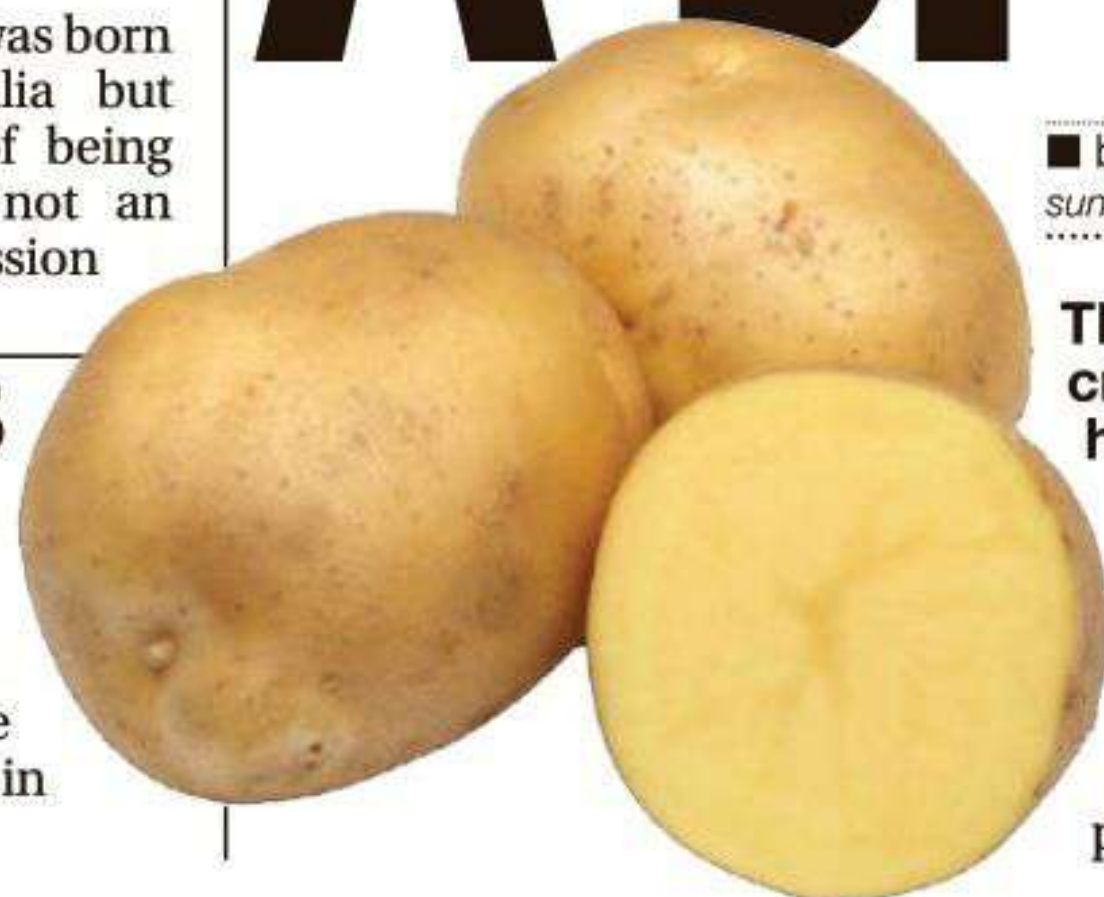

Richard H. Davis, boss of Beverage Marketing USA and Nautilus Mineral Waters of America, said the drink works by "reducing enteric methane which helps the liver block the reabsorption of alcohol".

The potato milk was tested on lab rats, with the trial so successful the drink is set to be made available in the US inside a month.

The inventor said: "Our studies on lab rats who were given catalase, the naturally occurring enzyme found in raw potato juice, sharply reduced the amount of blood alcohol levels in the study rats. The hangover cure is being tested in a clinical research study in Idaho. Finding participants to drink free beer should not be a problem."

Axing green levy doesn't fit the bill

LIZ Truss was in the year above me at school in Leeds. She's slagged my school off for its "poor educational standards".

According to her, teachers spent too much time talking about racism and sexism instead of teaching kids to read and write. Personally, I don't no wot she iz tawking abowt.

Now she's PM, her first move is to freeze energy bills.

But what's driving the surge in electricity and gas costs?

And does it have anything to do with the so-called green levy?

At the moment, for an average household without a fixed-price deal, annual bills are capped at £1,971.

Of this, only £153 goes towards green policies. That's less than 8% of the yearly bill. This money goes towards windfarms and solar power, but it also pays to improve the energy efficiency of low-income households.

It pays for the Warm Homes Discount too, which gives pensioners money off their energy bills. If the "green levy" was scrapped, these schemes would have to go as well.

Scrapping it also wouldn't make much of dent in your bills.

The big driver of bill rises is the surging cost of gas. The amount energy retailers pay for gas before selling it to customers has gone up by nearly 900% since February 2021. This rise is passed on to consumers. Because gas is used to generate electricity, wholesale electricity prices have rocketed too. So, if you want something to blame, blame fossil fuels not renewables. Assuming I got mi sumz rite, of course.

W£N-W£N

TRUSS-T me Liz – focus on making our homes less cold, leaky and damp. Energy efficiency reduces bills and emissions.

THE WRONG NUMBER
90%

THAT'S the proportion of energy bill increases driven by gas price rises. The best way out of the mess is to reduce our dependence on fossil fuels.

Gran makes doll just like 1-arm Remi

by HOLLY MEI-YU STAFFORD
sunday@dailystar.co.uk

A LITTLE girl born with no right forearm has a lookalike dolly made by her gran.

The family of one-year-old Remi Blackburn "celebrate" rather than commiserate with her differences, but struggled to find a toy that "represented her".

So the tot's nan Toni, 57, knitted her a doll with an identical shorter arm. Remi now takes "Dolly" everywhere with her. Mum Sarah Blackburn, 29, said: "She got given it at Christmas and hasn't put it down since."

Sarah and husband Jack Blackburn, 31, were told at Remi's 20-week scan that she would be born without a right forearm.

Medical care assistant Sarah said: "I knew that there was something wrong when the sonographer went quiet."

"When we came out of the scan I burst into tears as we were so overwhelmed with it all."

But doctors told the couple, from Reading, that Remi's limb wouldn't make any difference to her development. Sarah said: "It was a relief to feel like she was just a normal baby, which she is!"

She has now set up an Instagram page to raise awareness for limb difference and to document Remi's early years. She added: "I do wish there was more diversity in toys for babies and children."

'RUNNING SHORT': Milk

Climate rebels target our daily pints

by EMILY BEAMENT

CLIMATE activists claim their actions have led to empty milk shelves in supermarkets.

Animal Rebellion said it has been causing disruption to a number of dairy distribution facilities over five days, including occupying sites and damaging milk trucks.

Co-founder Dan Kidby said: "We fully stand by our actions and are demanding government action to transition to a plant-based food system which is the key solution to the climate crisis."

Animal Rebellion said shortages of fresh milk in north London were due to its targeting of Arla's depot in Hatfield, Herts.

The firm said that it was "working as quickly and safely as we can to continue delivering nutritious dairy around the country".

SHOT DEAD: Chris Kaba

Family bid to suspend Kaba cop

THE family of a man shot dead by a police officer say the cop involved should be "immediately suspended".

The demand came as hundreds of demonstrators gathered to protest against the fatal shooting of Chris Kaba, 24.

He was killed by a Met Police firearms officer in south London on Monday.

In a statement on behalf of the family, solicitor Daniel Machover said they would await the outcome of the police investigation "but seek a charging decision in this case in weeks or a few months, not years".

He added: "Public confidence in the police and our justice system requires the Independent Office for Police Conduct and Crown Prosecution Service to find a way to make decisions in this case on a timescale that delivers justice to all concerned. Avoidable delay is unacceptable."

"In the meantime the family demand that the Met Commissioner immediately suspend the firearms officer."

Three dead in rail crash

AT least three people have died and 11 more were hurt when a passenger train and a freight train collided.

It happened in central Croatia near the town of Novska on Friday night.

"The impact was huge," said Prime Minister Andrej Plenkovic, who rushed to the scene with other government officials.

Mr Plenkovic confirmed that so far bodies of three people had been found at the site of the accident.

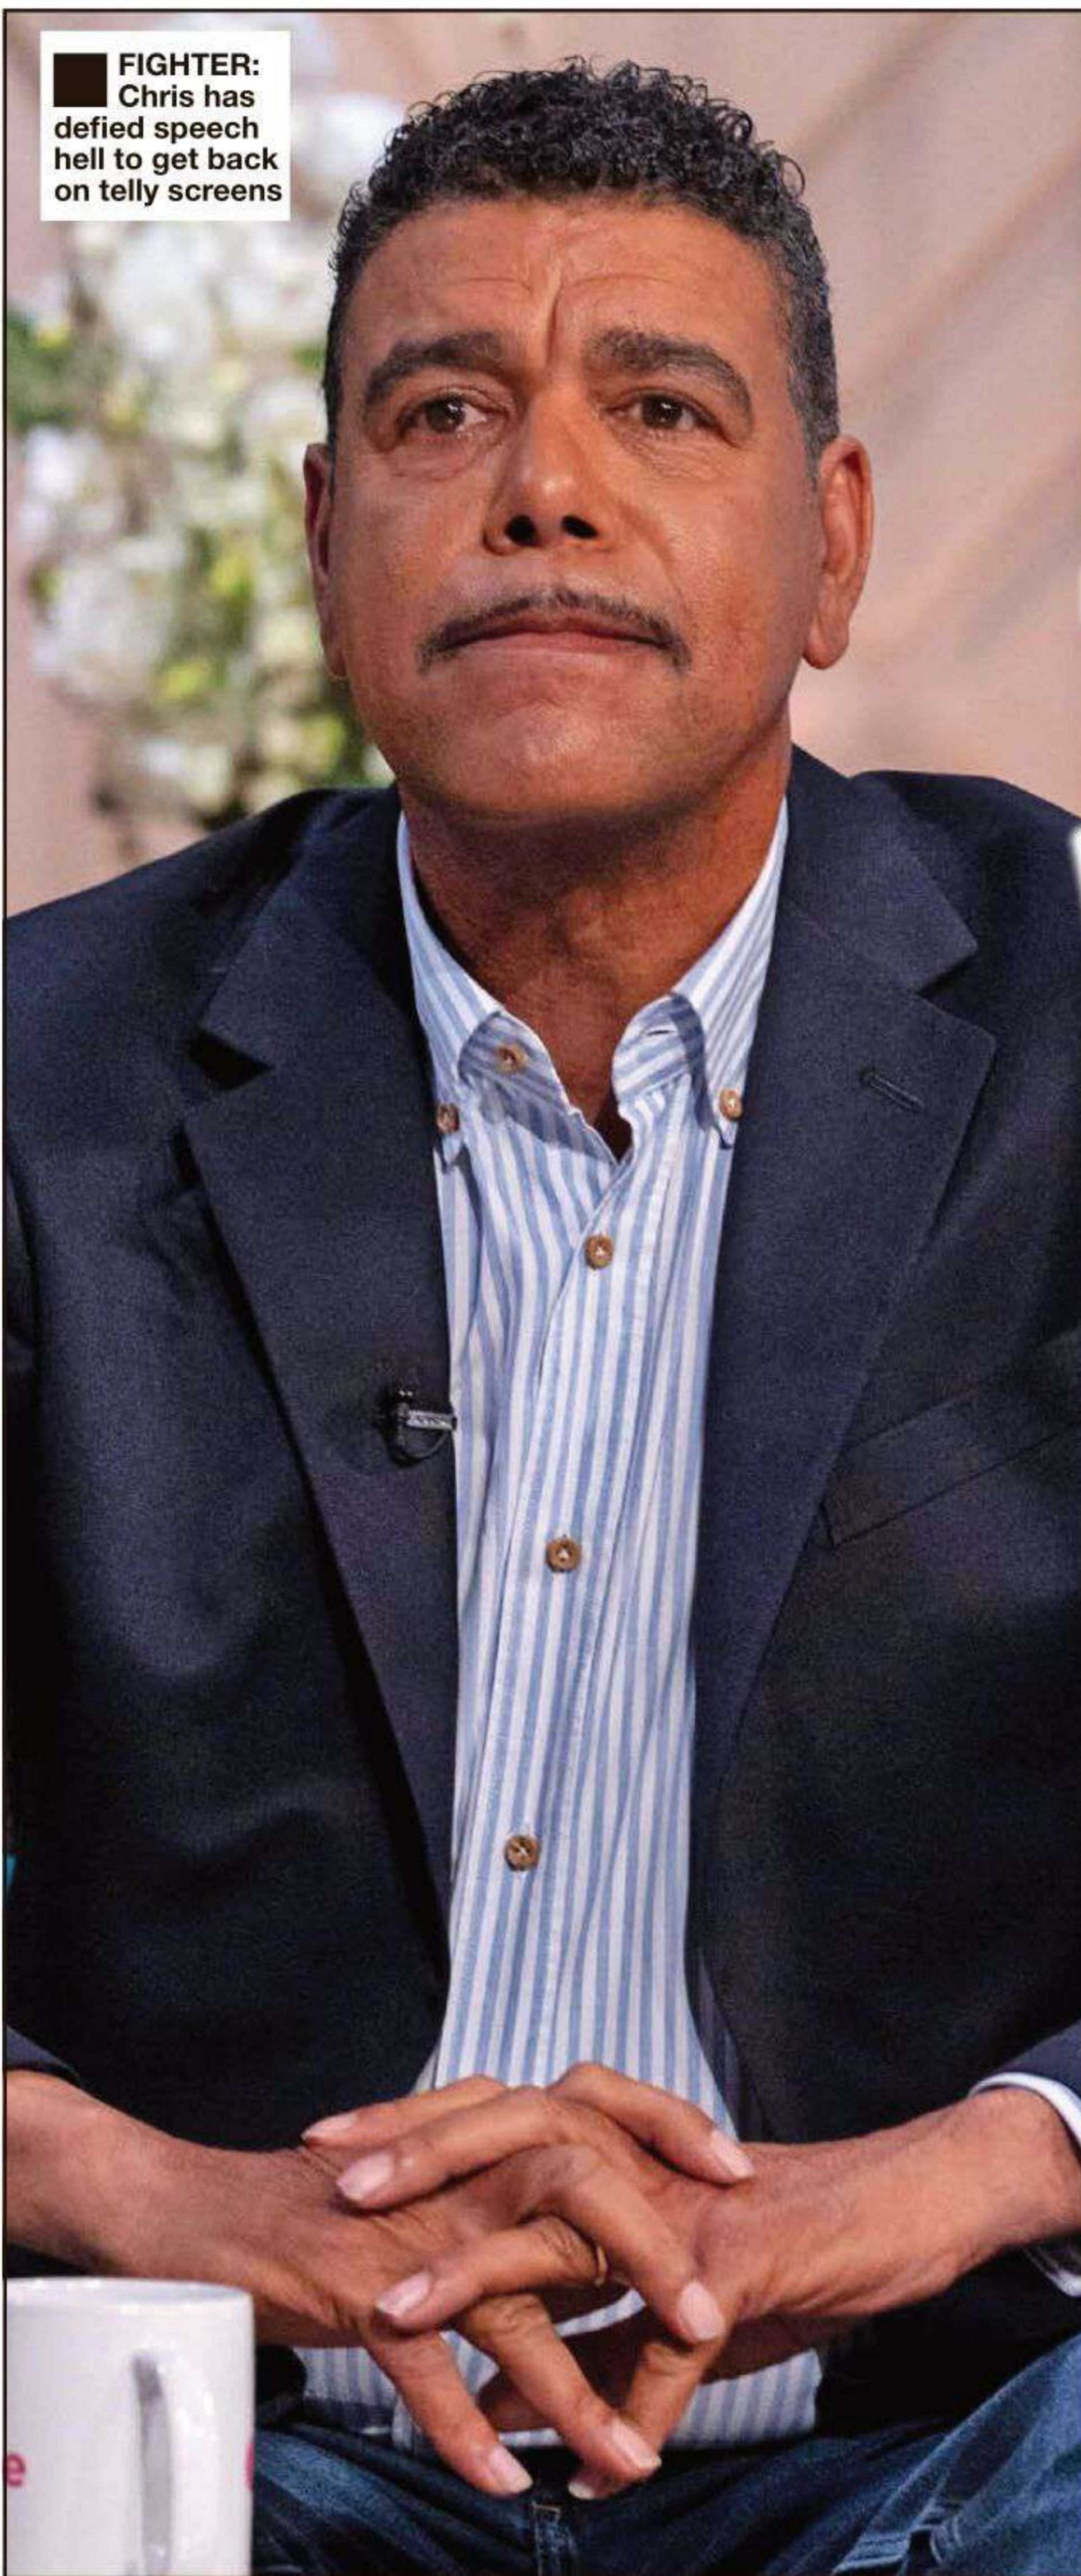

The injured have been hospitalised, some with serious injuries but none in life-threatening condition, he added.

The passenger train was on a local line carrying 13 people, while only the engine driver was in the freight train, said Mr Plenkovic. He added that foreign citizens were among the injured.

FIGHTER:
Chris has defied speech hell to get back on telly screens

KAMARA: I FEARED TV FINAL WHISTLE

Sport legend's ordeal

CHRIS Kamara's health battle has been so tough it made him want to quit TV.

by ED GLEAVE TV Editor
edward.gleave@dailystar.co.uk

The former Sky Sports presenter, 64, was heartbroken when he was diagnosed with speech apraxia.

It was so severe he was left struggling to talk and was left convinced his career as a TV commentator was over.

He told the Daily Star Sunday: "Ten months ago, I could hardly talk. The words hardly came out."

"My voice is my life at the moment."

"As a broadcaster, I need my voice and I need it to be spot on."

"So I could have gone away and gone into the background."

"I wanted to pack it all in. But ITV bosses wouldn't hear of it. Channel 4, Channel 5 and the BBC were exactly the same."

"Even now, some days I wake up and think, 'Why am I doing this? There are people better than me out there who are more qualified.'"

Chris has had support from fans, colleagues and telly execs.

The avalanche of kindness he's had has left him stunned.

He said: "It's overwhelming at times. People have been so kind and amazing."

It made me appreciate how lucky I am that people think that kindly of me and all the channels still want to employ me now. It is appreciated."

Jokingly, he added: "It is emotional, but then again I've got an under-active thyroid and that plays with your emotions anyway."

Brave Chris returned to TV to front ITV's The Games earlier this year. And he is currently back as one of the presenters on Ninja Warrior UK.

He said: "Everyone has accepted I am not the person I was before. I am a new person now."

"Day to day I can get by. There are good days and bad days. I am on the mend though."

"Everyone at Ninja Warrior has looked after me. They take the weight off my shoulders and do the stuff I can't do. Now I'm back working, I know it would have been devastating to have quit."

Ninja Warrior UK is on Saturday at 5.30pm on ITV.

TUCK INTO POSH STEAKAWAY FOR £66

CASH COW: Fancy steak & chips

LUXURY store Fortnum & Mason is flogging a takeaway steak and chips dinner – for just under £66.

The posh grocer is offering two ribeye steaks, a handful of chunky chips and a bottle of red for £60, with £5.95 postage on top.

Most supermarkets do a ribeye steak for a fiver but the famous London store reckons its slabs of beef and fancy fries are a cut above the rest.

Diners are told: "All wrapped up in Fortnum's Plastic-Free Bag for Life and ready for a delicious gourmet feast, The Fortnum's Steak & Chips Bag is the perfect dinnertime decadence.

by ISOBEL DICKINSON

"Inside you will find two Glenarm Salt-Aged Delmonico Ribeye Steaks, exclusive to Fortnum's, and a portion of triple-cooked chunky chips."

"Hand-selected from the Glenarm Estate in Northern Ireland, the ribeye has been dry-aged for between 28 and 42 days in the chamber which is made from more than 1,000 hand-cut bricks of salt. This chamber purifies the air and concentrates the flavour of the meat, producing an incomparable piece of beef."

It adds: "No dinner would be complete without a bottle, so we've included our Fortnum's Rosso Piceno – a seductive red with notes of vanilla and soft ripe cherry fruit on the palate. Let's dig in!"

And for pudding, Fortnum's suggests its chocolate and almond brownies – a snip at £18 for 500g.

MY SONGS WILL GET IN YOUR ED

★ IT sounds like Ed Sheeran has developed a raw nerve when it comes to criticism of his pop sound.

His latest album Equals has sold bucketloads but it's also garnered some haters.

But a defiant Ed said: "I don't give one crap about what people think about my songs, because I like them."

"Every time I release a song and someone doesn't like it, within five years they will like it."

"When I put out Multiply everyone's like, 'This is pop st! Why is he doing this?'. When Divide came out everyone was like, 'Oh, it's not Multiply.' Then Equals comes out and they're, 'Oh, it's no Divide.'"

"You just have to make music that you believe in and that you love – then people always catch up."

Jay revealed: "(Producer) Mike Stock asked Bobby if he would like to sing on this album, given that it was our anniversary."

HER FACE WAS SUPERPOWER

SHE was the most desired woman in rock and Debbie Harry loved tormenting her fans with her sexuality.

As Blondie return to the charts with a new boxset, the iconic front-woman has been reflecting on her popularity and the power she wielded over their adoring masses.

Debbie said: "When I was on stage, I could feel 5,000 people desiring me. Raw, animal physicality. I could feel them transmitting that strong sexuality and I picked it up, tormented them with it to excite them even more."

Debbie famously once said she didn't create Blondie "to become famous just for my looks".

She had one of the most famous faces on the planet and enjoyed the attention – but on her terms.

"I liked being on fans' bedroom walls," Debbie said with a wry smile. "Helping to keep them entertained."

She added: "Sex is what makes it all happen. Sex is why people dress well, comb their hair, brush their teeth and take showers."

"Sex appeal, looks, talent – they're the principal factors for success." And success is just what Debbie created with Blondie, documented in the band's excellent new boxset that features some rare performances as well as all the hits.

The music is incredible but what elevated the band was Debbie's alter ego, as she explained: "My character was an inflatable doll but with a dark, provocative side."

Debbie adds that she possessed a male mentality in a woman's body: "For me, it's always been like this: half-male, half-female. Not transsexual, not transvestite, not bi – just a double identity."

The singer has been sharing it all with her fans and wrote:

"Filming the music video for I'm Good in Ibiza has been an absolute dream."

IT'S WAILS IN SALES

WORKING in sales and customer service are officially the world's most miserable jobs.

Being a judge was also found to make people unhappy, despite having a top salary of £300,000.

The worst situation to be in is having bosses breathing down your neck, according to the study.

Prof Andrew Clark, of the Paris School of Economics, said: "Sales and customer service are terrible. There must be very little intrinsic reward to selling things."

The best jobs are where an employee has control, with a ship's captain or wall tiler topping the happy list, say boffins from the London and Paris schools of economics.

Prof Clark added: "Working in health and education brings a kind of reward in terms of doing good."

Britain is the 24th happiest country for life satisfaction.

Army kids' £83m class bill

DEFENCE chiefs are spending tens of millions a year paying for kids of top officers to attend elite private schools like Eton.

It dwarfs the amount the military pays to compensate veterans suffering from PTSD.

The MoD's accounts reveal it splashed out £83m last year to subsidise children of service personnel to go to private schools.

The average claim cost the taxpayer almost £29,000.

But just £2.5m was paid out to the 295 fighters who made successful claims that their military service had left them suffering from PTSD, with an average payout of £8,000.

Joe Ventre, from the TaxPayers'

by MATT DAVIS

sunday@dailystar.co.uk

Alliance, said: "Huge sums spent on private school subsidies will stun hard-working taxpayers." The MoD's generous schooling scheme - called the Continuity of Education Allowance - sees some staff benefit to the tune of more than £100,000-per-year as children of the military attend a host of top schools.

Figures for last year saw the scheme pay for 10 children to go to £46,000-per-year Eton, where Boris Johnson was a pupil.

Another 20 attended £37,000-per-year Fettes College in Edinburgh.

Under the MoD's schools fee scheme, service personnel can send their children to private school and pay just 10% of the fees - leaving the taxpayer to make up the difference. It allows children to stay at the same school as their parents are posted to different locations in the UK and around the world.

An MOD spokesman said that the schemes were "two totally distinct measures of support for our people, who serve us and keep us safe from threats every single day".

They added: "The education allowance helps thousands of military personnel and their families make that contribution, and the compensation scheme offers support for veterans on a case-by-case basis. We keep both schemes under regular review."

'World has a duty to help'

UN chief Antonio Guterres has toured Pakistan's flood-ravaged provinces after insisting the world must provide "massive" amounts of relief.

Mr Guterres was on a two-day visit to the poverty-stricken country, devastated by months of heavy monsoon rains and flooding.

At least 1,396 people have been killed, 12,728 injured and millions left homeless, while roads and communications are destroyed.

Mr Guterres said: "Pakistan needs today massive financial support to overcome this crisis.

"This is not a matter of generosity, this is a matter of justice."

BOOZER: Team-building Getting the chop good for office

AXE throwing, yoga and going to the pub are the most popular office "team-building" activities.

Bonding sessions for colleagues – many of whom haven't seen each other for two years – are on the rise, according to a poll.

The number of team-building sessions held this year have more than doubled compared to 2019, the survey of 2,000 office bosses and workers found.

Activities out of favour include paddle boarding, murder mystery games and paint balling.

A spokesman for Easy Offices, who carried out the poll, said: "We know the importance of bonding with your colleagues, and wanted to find the UK's favourite team-building activities."

"With a 182% increase in interest, human Monopoly is the most in-demand activity, followed by yoga and going to the pub."

Marks makes Sparks fly...

by STIAN ALEXANDER
sunday@dailystar.co.uk

WOMEN who wear M&S undies are more likely to be cheating on their partners.

Marks and Spencer's smalls were found to be the underwear of choice for two-timers.

Researchers quizzed 1,000 women – all self-confessed cheats – to discover their favourite brand of lingerie to wear when seeing their lover.

Some 34% named the iconic retailer.

Cheater Amy, 31, said M&S were her 'go to knickers' when meeting her secret admirer.

She said: "M&S knickers are pretty much fail safe – they look great and feel great, and are much better than those daft erotic knickers that spend most of their time up your bum."

A spokeswoman for married dating site Illicit Encounters, which conducted the poll, said: "We surveyed 1,000 of our female members to discover a few eye-opening facts about cheating."

"We found that Marks and Spencer was the number one place where women bought sexy underwear for their lover's eyes only, followed by Victoria's Secret, and Agent Provocateur."

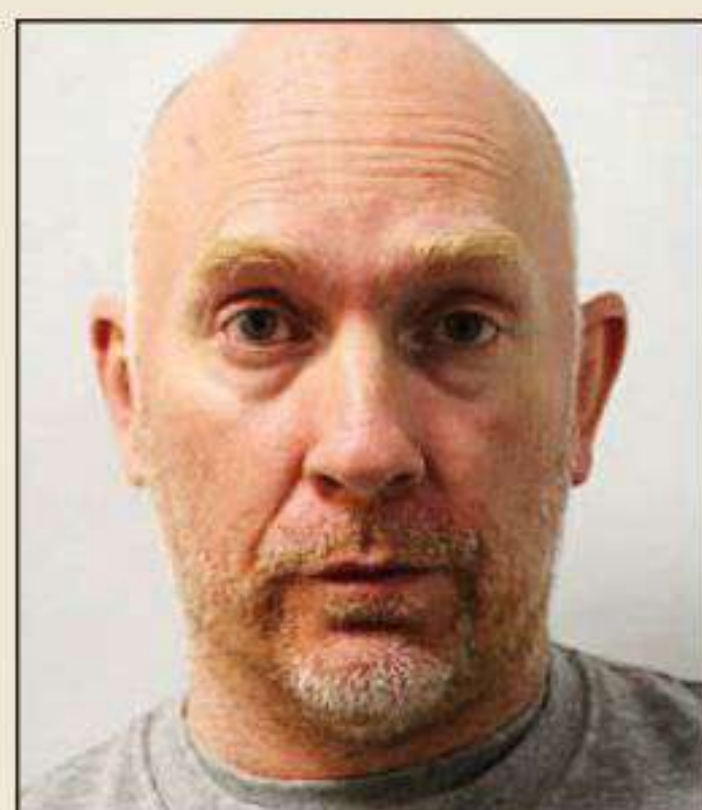

Jessica Leoni, sex and relationships expert at IllicitEncounters.com, said: "Marks and Sparks is the go-to store for women buying lingerie to wear for their illicit encounters."

"Not only is it convenient to grab groceries and sexy underwear in one place, it's also easier to hide on your bank statement."

'LINE OF DUTY' COPS TO CLEAN UP MET

MURDERER: Wayne Couzens

RACIST corrupt cops face being rooted out by Line Of Duty-style officers.

Met Police Commissioner Sir Mark Rowley wants investigators to root out prejudice and crime within the UK's biggest force.

Sir Mark officially replaces scandal-engulfed Dame Cressida Dick tomorrow, and will launch a 100-day plan to turn the Met around.

It comes after a number of allegations and scandals within the force, including the murder of Sarah Everard by firearms officer Wayne Couzens, 48.

by AARON TINNEY

A source said one of the straight-talking Sir Mark's first moves will be the recruitment of "more than 130 new investigators into the Directorate of Professional Standards" – his version of Line Of Duty's corruption-battling AC-12.

Officers will face stricter monitoring of work phones and computers – though Sir Mark will initially hold back on random checks of personal devices.

An insider warned the moves could expose the ugly side of policing, saying: "It will get worse before it gets better."

One of the worst scandals to recently rock the Met was the kidnap, rape and murder of Sarah in 2021 by serving officer Couzens – who had been branded a gun and porn-obsessed "weirdo" by colleagues. Hate messages were also sent between officers, with some boasting of violence against women. In one case, cops swapped images from a scene where two sisters lay murdered.

A source said Sir Mark's blueprint for overhauling the Met also included boosting crime-solving rates, improving services for victims of crime and more bobbies back on the beat to tackle neighbourhood crime.

70s Phil in the blanks

THE kid who played 1979's Phil Mitchell got him spot on. It's just a shame they didn't play Hit Me With Your Rhythm Stick when young Phil gave his rotten old man a spanking.

'79 had plenty of apt chart-toppers for Walford: Tragedy, Heart Of Glass, I Will Survive...

They couldn't have the telly on, though. The Bruvs might've seen their mum pop up on Blankety Blank. Unlikely Phil would forget the name of the man his dad murdered in cold blood...

Eric's "Let him have it" echoed the words killer Derek Bentley said in real life.

●WATCHING EastEnders is like walking through Detroit – you're never more than five minutes from the scene of a crime. Given the death rate it's a miracle Phil made it to 60.

Gutless Lycett

no ordinary Joe

JOE Lycett irritated the handful of people who watched Laura Kuenssberg's new BBC show for different reasons.

A few were outraged that he dared to mock Liz Truss.

But most probably thought, 'Is this all you've got, Joe? Some snidey sarcasm and cynicism?'

Where are the jokes? Where's the bite, the satire?'

Gags are in short supply on the Beeb. Last week they treated us to Frankie Boyle quipping that a lot of people in Edinburgh "need stabbing". So bold. So "radical".

They also wheeled out every pseud's favourite anti-comic, Stewart Lee, who spent a lengthy slab of his tedious Snowflake routine repeatedly saying the c-word.

Now hugely fat and wearing a drape jacket, Lee said: "I know what you're thinking, Ted Bovis has let himself go", failing to add "after a year or two at a 24-hour all-you-can-eat buffet".

Private school, Oxford-educated Stewart managed one half-decent joke, involving a false leg and a false widow spider. He spent the rest of the time attacking Ricky Gervais and novelist Tony Parsons, with digs at John Cleese and, inevitably, Brexit voters – most of them funnier or smarter than he is.

No BBC comic ever mocked EU waste, red-tape or financial incompetence.

Lee claims nothing is unsayable now. But that's not true, is it Stu?

Councils are still banning much-loved comics from their theatres, mad genius Jerry Sadowitz was silenced in Edinburgh. And a stand-up who mocked our useless leaders over, say, illegal immigration or the Blob's endless jiggy-wokery would never be welcome on the Beeb.

They prefer their rebels to be light, catty and gutless like Lycett, who, by the way, will profit enormously from the bonkers backlash.

METT ON HIS NTA GIG

in a psycho who loves stress of live TV'

JOEL Dommett is likely to be racked by nerves when he hosts the National Television Awards – and he can't wait.

The presenter, 37, admits he's a bit of a psycho because he enjoys going through hell when he does live TV.

He said: "The thing about live events is that you can prepare and rehearse and deliver jokes that are written to an inch of their lives, but people always remember the bits you can't plan for."

"I am a bit of a psychopath when it comes to presenting. I just love the pressure."

Joel gets so nervous when he hosts big events that he even worries it'll affect his health. He said: "I still feel new, naive and I still feel like I am learning."

"I wear a heart rate monitor and use my experience of fitness training to breathe properly and try and bring my heart rate down before going on stage so I don't get overwhelmed."

"But I do think I have come a long way though."

"I am a much more relaxed and calm presenter than I used to be." Joel hosted the awards for the first time in 2021 and nothing went wrong.

But this year's show – delayed to October 13 by the Queen's death – is at OVO Arena in Wembley, which means he'll be feeling extra pressure. He said: "Wembley is so prestigious. You kind of feel the weight of the name when you are there. It feels a bit more old school."

Some of TV's biggest names will be joining him on stage, so anything could happen.

And as it's airing live, producers won't be able to edit out any embarrassing moments.

Joel reckons the awards will be TV gold. He said: "I feel like this year will be funnier, more fun. It is going to be wild."

Joel isn't just hosting the awards, because he could end up being a winner too.

His show The Masked Singer is nominated in the Talent Show category up against Britain's Got Talent, RuPaul's Drag Race UK and Strictly.

He said: "I would love The Masked Singer to win, obviously. I would love to win a National Television Award as well as host it. But it will be hard because Strictly is on TV."

"They have a huge cast all tweeting and posting for votes and all I have is Jonathan Ross and Rita Ora, and the rest of the cast are secret!"

IT'S HOME WIN FOR FM'S FANS

THE footie might be on hold currently, but Sports Interactive has announced a release date for their next entry in the iconic Football Manager series.

FM 2023 launches on November 8 across all the usual places, but excitingly it's also set to debut on a home PlayStation console for the very first time.

The depth and drama of the world's leading football management simulation series will come to PS5. Using the Dualsense controller, FM23 Console will release alongside the PC/Mac title.

After a year away, the Football Manager Touch series is also returning. FM23 Touch will be available on the Nintendo Switch and Apple devices, through Apple Arcade.

Sports Interactive plans to announce new game features in the coming weeks, but have so far confirmed that this year's release will include newly-licensed competitions like UEFA's Champions, Europa and Europa Conference Leagues.

If you're looking to save some cash from today until launch, fans who pre-purchase FM23 (for PC and Mac), from a SEGA-approved digital retailer can receive a 20% discount and the chance to kick-off their managerial career ahead of schedule when it arrives in Early Access.

Do note though – any fans planning to purchase a physical copy of FM23 will notice this year's edition won't include a disc, as the company pushes ahead with being more eco-friendly.

Last year, Sports Interactive ditched plastic cases, and they say removing the disc and notebook will make the overall carbon footprint for FM23's packaging 47% lower than FM22's.

News Bites

- CYBERPUNK 2077's first and only major DLC, Phantom Liberty, will be released next year, it has been announced.
- CALL of Duty Warzone Mobile has been officially announced ahead of a full reveal next week.
- SONY Interactive Director and PlayStation hardware designer Masayasu Ito is retiring after 36 years with the company. Ito designed the PSP, PS3 and PS4.

Dear all Garden Bird Lovers,

As Autumn sets in, it is ever more important to feed our garden birds the very best! For birds that do migrate, they require a lot of calories to fly the thousands of miles they cover. For birds that stay at home, they will need a steady source of food to keep them healthy.

Five-fold increase in
'UFO' moth

Hummingbird's surprise copycat

Gardens are abuzz with the humming of one of nature's most confounding creatures.

Out of nowhere these Unfathomable Flying Objects materialise, all beady eyes and pulsating wings as they sip nectar from delicate flowers with their "beaks".

Little wonder that anyone witnessing these incredible aerobatics believes they have encountered the most accomplished of all avian flying machines - the hummingbird.

Persuading friends that they haven't actually seen the world's smallest yet most technically advanced bird hovering this side of the Atlantic has been a challenge these past weeks.

Instead, they have seen one of the natural world's finest examples of convergent evolution - when animals independently evolve similar traits - in the shape of the hummingbird hawkmoth.

Anyone who has spied a hummingbird buzzing through the canopy of a Brazilian rainforest or drinking from a sugar-water feeder on a Texan porch, and then returned to Britain to see the hawkmoth, will attest to the remarkable similarities between bird and bug.

Indeed, the first time I saw a diminutive tufted coquette hummingbird in the gardens of a Trinidad nature reserve, I was convinced it was a hawkmoth. There was little difference in size and the bird's most striking field mark on show was a white band across the rump, a feature shared by the insect.

How the moth and bird can look similar illustrates the way animals can adapt to look like each other if they have similar lifestyles. Think of penguins in Antarctica and the guillemots of the Arctic.

This summer has been a boom time for hummingbird hawkmoths from southern climes. Members of the British Trust for Ornithology's Garden BirdWatch scheme have recorded a near five-fold increase above the annual average.

So what did we call hummingbird hawkmoths before the first naturalists arrived in the Americas? A delve into the writings of Virginia Woolf shows how she came across the moths while holidaying in Cornwall, where their zigzag hovering flights earned them the traditional name of the merrylee-dance-a-pole.

Ornamental alliums are lollipop baubles of colour to enrich any plot or bed

It's that time of year again when the garden centres and supermarkets wheel out their bulb collections.

Bulbs are packages of potential, containing the embryos of leaves and flowers which will burst into life next spring. Purchase now so you get the pick of the crop and put them into the ground as quickly as possible.

The exception to this rule is tulips which are traditionally planted in November to reduce the risk of fungal disease. Alliums, or ornamental onions, are an excellent place to start. They are easy to grow and do a great job of bridging the gap between spring and summer.

They begin to flower in May, and this has made them a firm favourite with garden designers at the annual Chelsea Flower Show.

I love using them in a fun way - lollipop baubles of colour drifting through planting schemes. Dot them among other perennials in a wave formation and then forget about them until next year when they will pop up and reward you with their beautiful firework globes.

In the wild, alliums often grow in poor, stony ground and thin soil so you don't need to enrich your soil. On the whole, they will thrive in well-drained soil in a sunny position and look glorious in any garden. Whether you prefer a relaxed cottage garden style or more formal and co-ordinated planting, there will be an allium to suit you.

The single flowering stem of each bulb lasts for weeks and their seed heads have added value as they can be dried and used for decoration or, when left in situ, look great in the border on a cold and frosty morning.

Alliums bring fireworks in the summer and still contribute much appreciated structure to the border throughout winter. There are plenty of colours available from purple, pink and blue to yellow and white. Plant sizes within the family vary considerably with tiny species available for rock gardens to the drum-stick types with stout upright stems topped with balls of colour.

The taller ones provide vertical interest and rounded symmetry to mixed areas of planting where other varieties are grown for their massive pompom-like flower heads that are almost the size of melons.

Look for the heaviest and largest ones for the best flowers and, as with other bulbs, plant them at a depth three to four times the diameter of the bulb.

They are widely available as young plants for immediate effect, but this will be more expensive so plant bulbs from now through to November to allow their root systems to develop over winter.

Pick of the crop

Allium giganteum

This allium is one of the tallest at 1.2m. It blossoms from June and produces flower balls the size of grapefruits which are made up of tiny, purple, star-shaped flowers.

Allium cristophii

Star of Persia is an impressive globe of beautiful starry violet flowers with a metallic sheen and looks equally great in the border or in a vase.

Allium x hollandicum 'Purple Sensation'

So dependable, this allium has rich, deep plum flower heads with a 10cm diameter. It is an excellent combination plant - try planting it with grasses or box for great effect.

Allium 'Mount Everest'

Another grapefruit-sized globe, but this time made up of a mass of white flowers on a strong stem. It towers at 1.2m and will complement brightly coloured planting beautifully.

Allium 'Hair'

And now time for something completely different - this is a most unusual looking allium. The small purple flowers have hair-like tendrils that extend out like the flower is having a bad hair day - great fun!

JOBS for the week

■ Get a head start with hardy annuals, and sow now. These can be sown in situ or in trays.

■ If you have an area set aside as meadow, it's time to give it its autumn chop. Cut as close to ground as possible and remove cuttings. This allows the light in and helps germination of new seeds.

■ Remove summer raspberry canes which have finished fruiting. Next year's fruit will be on the fresh green canes and these need tying in to supports. No raspberries? Think about ordering them and other fruiting canes, such as blackberries, now as you can plant them in the dormant season this winter.

■ Dry days make good seed-collection days. Armed with a brown paper bag and pen, shake the seed into the bag and label. Many seeds can be sown fresh now or kept in a dry cool place for spring sowing.

■ It's a good time of year for soil improvement while the earth is still pliable and not waterlogged - dig in your garden compost or fork in some well-rotted manure.

■ While the ground is still warm, it's a good time to plant herbaceous perennials. The soil is still warm, which encourages root growth before winter sets in, and there's also sufficient moisture to hydrate them. By planting now, you give your plants a head start so that by spring they are raring to go.

■ For the same reasons, it's also a good time to lift and divide perennials which have become congested and need some rejuvenation. They won't all like division - for example, those with long tap roots, such as cow parsley - and it's best to leave those that are flowering now, such as rudbeckia, to spring division. When replanting divisions or new perennials, give them a good soak and keep them well-watered to help them establish.

PLANT of the week

Aconitum 'Bressingham Spire'

The common name for this plant is monkshood, which is a pretty good description of the hooded violet flowers. It's a stalwart of the late-flowering herbaceous border, tall and elegant.

But it does come with a health warning as all parts of the plants are very toxic if ingested and you should wear gloves if touching it.

Grow in moisture-retentive, fertile soil, ideally in partial shade but it will do fine in the sun so long as the soil doesn't dry out.

'Bressingham Spire' is a good compact variety growing to 3ft. Taller varieties may need staking.

YOU ASK

Hi Diarmuid

I have a lime tree which isn't looking so great. I put it outdoors for summer and it has produced some limes. I've already re-potted it once - should I do so again?

Juliette

Hi Juliette

Yes, your tree does look a bit poorly. I think it has mealybug - these are insects covered in white which suck the sap from plants, so your first job is to give the shrub a good wash. Remove all these insects and keep an eye out for them in future.

If possible, it's good to re-pot annually in March as citrus are hungry plants and fresh compost is best.

Add horticultural grit to the compost to keep it free draining. I'd also give it a good pruning in spring to encourage a bushy shape - you can cut back quite hard.

Finally, it's time to take it back indoors before the nights get too cold. Keep it somewhere cool over winter as most houses are too dry and hot.

Diarmuid

It's a Ducati-ghini

Ducati and Lamborghini are both part of the Volkswagen Group empire - so it's not surprising the two exotic brands have made use of the family ties to come up with this joint effort.

It's the Ducati Streetfighter V4 Lamborghini. Ducati will build 630 bikes, and then a further 63 that will come as a pair with a Lamborghini Huracan STO.

These 63 bikes will have body colours and wheel rims matching the car the customer owns, plus a matching seat and front brake calipers.

The 630 regular bikes will be painted in Verde Citrea/Arancia Dac - a colour used on the limited edition Lamborghini Huracan STO.

No prices are mentioned but I'd be happy with a regular Ducati Streetfighter in Ducati red.

Corsa-e looking good at 40... with odd extras

Buy one of these Vauxhall Corsa-e anniversary editions, and Vauxhall will throw in four pairs of new socks. They're a snazzy tartan and thanks to the company's generosity in bunging some in our test car, I'm wearing mine now.

The Corsa-e anniversary edition celebrates 40 years of the Corsa. But those of us with good memories will know that although Opel always called its small hatchback the Corsa, in the UK the car started its life as the Nova and became the Corsa in 1993.

In the 1980s, Vauxhall invented the concept of the "warm hatchback" when it launched the Nova SR.

The SR provided some of the glamour of hot hatches of the day but not the power or the insurance premium. You got sports seats in the SR that were trimmed in tartan cloth. Hence the socks.

Two pairs of your free socks are in that design and the others are in the tartan check used in the 2022 anniversary edition. They will go down fine at the golf club.

Texas supercar maker Hennessey launched a new convertible version of its Venom F5 at the recent Salon Prive event at Blenheim Palace in Oxfordshire.

It's powered by the same twin-turbo 6.6-litre V8 engine as the F5 coupe, but cranked up from 1,792bhp to 1,817bhp.

Top speed is 300mph, with 0-62mph in 2.6 seconds. Equally mind-boggling is the £2.5million price. Only 30 F5 Venom Roadsters will be built, so they'll be a rare sight.

Sock 'n' roll

Corsa in its name. That means electric in Vauxhall's badging system. So a 50kWh battery, a range of up to 222 miles and 100kW rapid charging. Vauxhall will only be making 1,000 versions for the UK market (and presumably 4,000 pairs of socks), which sounds a lot but isn't so many when you consider that the Corsa is a huge seller with tens of thousands of them leaving the forecourts each year.

Obviously free socks is not a sufficient draw for you to buy a special edition car so here's some other special features that might sway you. It comes exclusively in Record Red – a metallic finish inspired by the Carmine Red used on the original Nova.

The Corsa-e anniversary looks neat in this colour, especially as also included is a black roof, black grille with black Vauxhall griffin badge and black "Corsa" lettering across the tailgate. Topped off by 17in gloss black alloys with grey inserts.

Inside are sports seats trimmed in the new tartan design. I'm a sucker for this sort of thing and prefer cloth seats to leather. Not that the anniversary Corsa-e is lean on the options: heated seats and steering wheel, power folding mirrors and rear parking sensors are all included. The on-the-road price for all this is £31,000.

Just to remind you, as it's a couple of years since we first wrote about the electric Corsa, here's the basics.

You have three driving modes in front of you: Normal, which allows you 107bhp; Eco which gives you 81bhp and Sport which serves up the full 134bhp. The car starts in Normal and that's the best one to keep it in, unless you really want to run the battery down quickly and regularly use the Corsa-e's 7.6 seconds 0-60mph sprinting ability.

Eco is the mode to use if you're on a long journey and absolutely need to string out the range.

The Corsa-e is essentially the same car as the Peugeot e-208 but with a less interesting interior.

The added tartan of this Corsa and its cool-looking exterior makes up for this. And there's the free socks of course.

Welcome to classic club

Classic car insurer Hagerty, the firm behind the wonderful Festival of the Unexceptional event, is setting up a clubhouse at Bicester Heritage, the ex-RAF base in Oxfordshire, that looks like becoming the centre of the classic car movement in this country.

Hagerty promises it will hold regular events at its clubhouse including vehicle displays, industry presentations and celebrity talks.

All sounds like fun but I'd like to know who will be eligible to visit. I hope it isn't some exclusive thing and anyone with a passion for old cars, whether a Vauxhall Viva or an E-Type Jaguar, can join in.

CAR MARKET'S ALL USED UP

Contrary to recent speculation, the used car market is still booming. Last month the average price of a used car was up 36.4% on August 2020 and marked the 29th month of consecutive price growth.

I can see the trend carrying on as new cars continue to be more expensive. Also, modern cars are so well made and contain so many features that the incentive to buy new is less than it used to be.

Many of us, faced with increasing household bills, would probably prefer to save by buying a used car rather than buy new and miss out on a holiday.

The old-fashioned whodunnit is enjoying a comeback. Next month sees the release of Amsterdam, a 1930s-set murder-mystery starring Christian Bale, Margot Robbie and Robert De Niro. And at Christmas, Daniel Craig returns as sleuth Benoit Blanc in Glass Onion, the sequel to the 2019 hit Knives Out.

This week, we are treated to two, Bodies Bodies Bodies (see right) and this ingenious comedy, which takes a sideways look at Agatha Christie's long-running West End play The Mousetrap.

Made more in the spirit of Margaret Rutherford's farcical Marple than Kenneth Branagh's dour Poirot, this entertaining Brit flick offers two whodunnits for the price of one.

We're in the 1950s as the original cast celebrates the play's 100th performance in the bar of the Ambassador Theatre when the body of a Hollywood director is discovered on its famous stage.

The obnoxious Leo Kopernick (Adrien Brody) had been working on a movie adaptation with precious playwright Mervyn Cocker-Norris (David Oyelowo).

The world-weary Inspector Stoppard and enthusiastic rookie Constable Stalker (Sam Rockwell and Saoirse Ronan, both excellent) find no shortage of suspects.

At the celebrations, a drunken Kopernick incurred the wrath of the play's star, darling Dickie Attenborough (a very funny Harris Dickinson).

The prissy Cocker-Norris had clashed with the crass American too. And it turns out Kopernick had blackmailed Reece Shearsmith's film producer into paying for his plush suite at the Savoy.

In the tradition of the big-screen murder mystery, the setting offers period glamour, the plot sees the immoral rich get their just desserts, and a tidy puzzle allows us to escape the complexities of an uncertain world.

So why is the whodunnit having a moment? There may be clues in the previous paragraph.

A childish game takes a macabre turn in this entertaining US murder mystery.

The setting is a plush poolside mansion where a gang of wealthy, American and thoroughly obnoxious 20-somethings (including Amandla Stenberg, Maria Bakalova and Pete Davidson) are partying their way through a hurricane.

After the thrills of champagne swilling and coke-snorting wear off, they look for fresh kicks with a game Americans appear to call Bodies, Bodies, Bodies but Brits may recognise as Murder In The Dark.

You can probably tell where this is heading. The pretend murders turn out to be real and the rich kids are forced to turn detective.

The killings aren't especially scary but there's some sharp dialogue as the self-obsessed youths attack each with psycho-babble buzzwords such as “gas lighting” and “triggering”.

While the whodunnit genre makes a killing, the steam seems to have gone out of the musical's comeback. And sadly, while this muddled Brit flick scores highly for originality, it's a few thousands miles from becoming the next La La Land.

Most of the film is set in a rural cafe, where two minor-league criminals (actor-musician Johnny Flynn and actor Will Poulter) are waiting to do a £20,000 deal (one possible meaning of the score of the title) with tardy hoodlums.

As Poulter's character falls for Naomi Ackie's waitress and the lads reveal their thinly sketched back stories, everyone keeps bursting into song. Not the exuberant life-affirming numbers we've come to expect but soul-searching indie ballads from Flynn's back catalogue.

All three actors deliver compelling performances but the few lyrics I could pick out from the over-produced score (another possible explanation for the title) had little to do with the plot.

It was a washout summer for kids' animation so the breezy third instalment in this dubbed Spanish series could appeal to little ones tired of the limited charms of Minions 2 and DC League Of Super-Pets.

Chicago bricklayer and wannabe Indiana Jones Tad Stones (voiced by Trevor White) is still living with his flatulent undead flatmate Mummy (Joseph Balderrama) when they both get sucked into a new globe-trotting adventure.

The animation is gorgeous and there are zippy chase scenes in Paris and Egypt. But witless dialogue means that there's little to treasure for accompanying adults.

Disturbing, kinky, disgusting, annoying. Canadian director David Cronenberg's new nightmare will be everything his fans dreamed of.

Here, the 79-year-old probes the same issues and pushes the same buttons that made Scanners, Videodrome and Crash so horribly memorable.

Once again, human evolution is the theme as we are thrown into a grim and very grimy future where pain has almost vanished. Performance artist Saul Tensor (Viggo Mortensen) keeps growing new mutant organs and he's getting them surgically removed on stage by his Kristen Stewart's government agent is watching in a state of quivering excitement. “Surgery is the new sex,” she whispers to Tensor after the gory show.

Tensor may be the most famous producer of new organs but he's not alone.

The authorities are increasingly worried about the rapidly changing human anatomy, believing we're reaching a new stage of evolution that desperately needs to be kept in check.

The dense dialogue and slow but very deliberate pace can make for hard work. But I suspect this is another Cronenberg “body horror” that will be very hard to shake off.

A ski safari in the stunning Swiss Alps brings thrills on and off the pistes for Peter Fenton

So there I am, hiking up a mountain, on snowshoes, in the dark, with a 30lb rucksack on my back... is this really a unique dinner experience, or did I accidentally sign up for TV reality show SAS Who Dares Wins?

Luckily there were no ambushes or extreme interrogations, and as for the backpack, well, we couldn't leave the wine behind, could we?

Our small party soon reached some picnic tables, and as the sun sank behind the Alps, our guide and chef Stephane, who'd carried up the rest of the food and utensils, built a log fire and placed a half-wheel of Raclette cheese close to the flames.

This is the regional dish of Valais, in southwest Switzerland, and this is the traditional way to cook it, with layers of the delicious melted cheese continually scraped off to be served with potatoes or bread, silver skin onions and a glass (or two) of Fendant, the local white wine.

And what a way to enjoy it. Glancing up at a myriad glittering stars, conversation tailed off for a moment, the silence broken only by the soft crackle of the wood fire.

Stephane fuelled the magic with a glass of Genepi, the local ju-ju juice flavoured with mountain herbs, and the descent home, with a considerably lighter pack, was a breeze.

The next morning, stepping out on the balcony of my room at the Hotel Nendaz 4 Vallees, the mountain peaks were sparkling white under a clear blue sky (the area boasts 300 days of sunshine a year) and the slopes of the ski resort of Nendaz were beckoning.

It is part of the 4 Vallees ski area, the largest in Switzerland with 400km of pistes stretching from small, quiet Thyon at the eastern end to the cosmopolitan chic of Verbier at the western end.

The best view of it, and a great deal more of the Alps, is from Mont Fort, the resort's highest peak at 3,330 metres. At the top of the cable car there's a viewing platform where you feel on top of the world with the distinctive Matterhorn in one direction and Mont Blanc in another. On the valley floor a long way below is the regional capital Sion, with the River Rhone flowing through it.

You can ski down from the top of Mont Fort but it's one of the area's steepest runs and with no fresh snow, the large moguls (bumps) were listening with ice.

We sensibly took the cable car back down to the Black Tap restaurant, which serves excellent craft burgers.

You don't have to be an expert to enjoy the 4 Vallees. There are blue slopes for beginners and improvers around neighbouring Veysonnaz and Thyon, slightly more red slopes for intermediate-level skiers and a decent number of black graded slopes for the experts around Nendaz and Verbier.

Many have the latest snowmaking equipment so in these days of climate change and unpredictable conditions, there is still good quality skiing to be had.

For skiers and boarders looking for off-piste thrills, Verbier is famous and there are free ride routes marked across the 4 Vallees. We made our way down one of them, the Chassoure-Tortin, a long steep and bumpy run.

There were tumbles and protesting limbs... but a great sense of achievement and the respect of ski guide Ami, who coaxed everyone down safely.

Those aching muscles were soothed in the impressive spa at our four-star hotel, with its outdoor heated pool, sauna, Jacuzzi and steam rooms.

There was still time for a beer and an Aperol spritz just down the road at the bar, where a DJ whipped up the apres-ski crowd with vintage mixes.

Dinner was at Les Etagnes, a restaurant opposite the hotel, offering chicken or prawn Thai curry, rack of lamb, and beef fillet among its main courses, with a veggie or vegan curry option on request. Starters were £11 with mains from £25-£35. A dessert treat was Sgroppino, an Italian cocktail with vodka, lemon sorbet, prosecco and limoncello... not as alcoholic as it sounds but really delicious (£9).

Valais produces some excellent wine, though not enough to export in any quantity. Best value was a bottle of Petite Arvine white at £20.

The neighbouring resort of Veysonnaz was the next stage of our Ski Safari package, an option offered by 4 Vallées where you can split your stay between resorts.

While we hit the ski lifts, our luggage was taken to the Hotel Chalet Royale, 10 metres from the main Veysonnaz gondola and which offers another stunning panoramic view of the mountains from its bedrooms.

We made our way up a succession of lifts and skied down some wide flattering red slopes. Down into Siviez in the Valley de la Printse (one of the 4) and up to Greppon Blanc peak at 2,700 metres with a breathtaking view down into the Val des Dix.

At the peak is a signpost for l'Eteygeon, a free ride route where, when the snow is good, you can ski or board all the way down to the road that runs through the valley then catch a bus back into town.

But after three hours on the snow we were hungry and thirsty. One more run down from Greppon, we found Restaurant les Chottes – rightly famous in the 4 Vallées and not to be missed. A former cheese farm, the interior is replete with wooden beams and cowbells.

Outside is an intriguing tunnel entrance in the wall of snow piled up at the side of the restaurant.

On the huge sun-trap terrace we settled down with beers and Fendant and shared an Assiette Valaisanne (£22), a platter with locally produced dried meat, cheese, cured sausage and rye bread.

I followed with the Roesti du Chasseur (£20), a Swiss classic of grated potato patty topped with cheese, bacon, tomato and egg.

It's not exactly cheap, but is far less than you'll pay in Verbier. The scenery is priceless and it was a reluctant band that returned through the tunnel to retrieve our skis for the rest of the afternoon.

There were still treats to come though. After checking out the ramps on the snow park above Thyon (no one volunteered for a freestyle demonstration after our two-hour lunch!) we headed to the top of the Piste de L'Ours, the custom built downhill race course.

At 2.3km long, with a 51% gradient in parts, and two big jumps, it has hosted over 30 World Cup ski races as well as ski-cross and Paralympic ski competitions.

We didn't quite manage it in the two minutes the racers usually take – there were lots of turns and the occasional rest but I'm blaming the roesti and beer – but it is fabulous.

A quick gondola back up, then another red cruiser took us into Veysonnaz, with our hotel across the road from the lift station.

It's a compact, sleepy village but for families with young children and those who don't require a techno drumbeat to wind down after a day on the slopes, it is just fine.

The Chalet Royale has a large terrace with a view over the Rhone valley and we kicked back in the outdoor hot tub with a glass of prosecco as the sun went down on another great day in the mountains.

HOTEL OF THE WEEK

BY MIKE WALTERS

Great Northern Hotel King's Cross, London

WHERE AND WHY

Station hotels are usually busy pit stops and the travellers' urgency can be more frenetic than the balls in a lottery tombola.

But wedged between King's Cross and St Pancras, a sweeping Grade II listed building from the golden age of steam achieves the unlikely feat of perfect calm. On a weekend when 40,000 boisterous football fans were piling down to the capital for a big match, inside the hotel, silence was golden.

Not once was the soundproofing among 88 en-suite bedrooms penetrated by the tribal hordes' lively playlist, let alone the echo of platform announcements.

There are four different categories, from the Couchette paying homage to the classic continental railway sleeper carriage, to the rich walnut panels of Edwardian rooms on the top floor, bespoke leather furniture in the Heritage chambers and opulent luxury of Victorian bedrooms celebrating the building's history.

In our Victorian, the high ceiling made a generous double room feel airy and bright, and the Albion standalone bath tub was deep enough to go scuba-diving. All rooms contain USB ports, continental plug sockets and HD TV with Google Chromecast streaming option. And for connoisseurs of bathroom toiletries, the Malin + Goetz range is nearer Harrods than corner shop in the pantheon of complimentary soap.

ON THE MENU

Named after the Flying Scotsman's dining cars in the 19th century, the Plum + Spilt Milk is a brasserie-style restaurant illuminated by 150 hand-blown glass lanterns.

If the food makes you feel like the earth has moved, you're right: The black tables are made from cracked lava from Mount Etna.

As a lifelong pescatarian, it would have been rude to ignore a menu with intriguing seafood dishes, and the Dorset crab salad (£14) was lighter and fluffier than a hummingbird.

For main course, it was posh fish and chips. At £31 a head, the sea bream was succulent, the seared chalkstream trout was divine.

The Portuguese house white, Esporao Reserve (£25), was quaffable and resplendent. Eton Mess (£10) was spot-on for dessert.

HOT HOTEL Royal Apollonia Limassol, Cyprus

BY LUCY WILLIAMSON

Heart & Limassol

Vibe

Calm, confident and classy. The five-star Royal Apollonia hotel in Limassol, Cyprus, gives a sense that they know what they are doing, without having to boast about it.

And that quiet confidence is backed up. Part of the Louis Hotel Group, it has 77 years' experience in luxury hotels in Cyprus and Greece. Yet it manages to maintain its family-run feel. From the front desk to the bartenders, the smiling staff have an unfailing warmth. Akin to the feeling of stepping off the plane for the first time and being met by sunshine and your grandma who refuses to let you go hungry. It's unsurprising that some guests choose to come back year after year.

Style

Wherever you are in the hotel, you get 180 degree views of the twinkling Mediterranean. And yet there was a tranquil sense of privacy.

The clever alcoves around the figure-of-eight-shaped pool allow quieter areas that nestle you into a world of retreat. The hardest choice of the day will be whether you want to be closer to the private beach or the pool.

Opt for the pool to enjoy the ever-luxurious swim-up bar. The pool-bar cocktails, particularly the signature Cyprus Sky, are well-mixed and pleasingly strong.

COMFORT Rooms

TRANQUIL Relaxed vibe at

Rooms

The 204 rooms draw on contemporary styling to achieve an understated sense of luxury. If you can, book one of the rooms with its own private Jacuzzi.

Sipping on the complimentary bubbles amid the bubbles looking out on that view will have you feeling like a modern-day Aphrodite. More than just a place to freshen up, the well-serviced rooms, complete with all the luxury bathroom amenities, give off romantic energy, which can even be enjoyed alone.

Food and Drink

Halloumi, feta, halloumi, moussaka and more halloumi. The Royal Apollonia puts on a buffet-style feast fit for the gods. There are three dining options – the same buffet feast for lunch and dinner at Dionysos or a la carte options at the Japanese themed Akakiko restaurant, and Meze by Elliniko.

Spa

While the huge, open plan, bright lobby gives off an energetic opulence, the spa hidden away below is shrouded in a cosy and relaxed atmosphere enhanced by its design in wood and stone.

Access to the fitness room, pool, steam room and sauna are free of charge for hotel guests.

I also opted for the Dead Sea mud experience, meant to be great for eczema. I was lathered head to toe in mud before relaxing in a warming room that emulates the exact conditions of the Dead Sea.

What to do

Situated in Limassol, the second-largest city on the island, The Royal Apollonia is a short drive from the city centre and within walking distance from the tourist area where bars and restaurants are found in abundance.

You might not instantly associate Cyprus with wine but it's heavenly when tasted overlooking the mountain peaks of Troodos, facing the magnificent Mount Olympus at the Vassiliades winery. Just try not to be taken in by the Zivania, the perilous Cypriot pomace brandy at up to 60% proof.

If you fancy a stop on the way, the Agrovino Tavern in the tucked-away village of Lofou is a must with its delicious meze dishes from the family-run, rustic taverna. The village itself offers beautiful honey-coloured stone cottages lining steep cobbled streets. A quintessential Cypriot village – or like a real-life Mamma Mia! film set to you and me.

And if you're after more history, follow the Limassol coastline to the ancient city of Amathus, Kolossi Castle and the amphitheatre at Kourion.

Hamitup

JOIN the value train and get on board British raider HAMISH (4.10) to turn over red-hot favourite Kyprios in the Group One Comer Group International Irish St Leger this afternoon at the Curragh.

Trainer William Haggas has been waiting for the heavens to open for his soft-ground performer and now that he finally has a favourable surface to race on, the lightly raced six-year-old can turn over Aidan O'Brien's Ascot Gold Cup hero.

Restricted to just 11 career outings since making his debut in April 2019, the selection easily landed the Group Three Ormonde Stakes at Chester on his only start this season in May.

This will be his first start since then but Hamish has a great record when fresh and it may be the ground conditions will suit him better than the short-priced market leader.

Aidan O'Brien has won the Vincent O'Brien National Stakes three times in the last 10 years and 11 times since 1996 but his unbeaten Aesop's Fables could taste defeat for the first time at the hands of SHARTASH (3.35).

The son of Invincible Spirit was a convincing winner of the Railway Stakes in June before being put in his place by the mighty Little Big Bear in the Phoenix Stakes last time out.

However, that six furlongs in the highest grade looked a bare minimum for him and the extra 220 yards looks right up his street and can see him land a third career win.

The Ballydoyle maestro should gain a huge slice of consolation by landing the Group One Moyglare Stud Stakes with MEDITATE (3.00) who is seeking a five-timer.

Winner of the Albany Stakes at Royal Ascot, she put up an even better performance with a cosy success in the Debutante at the Curragh last month and should only have the lightly-raced Tahiyra to worry about.

There is a big handicap pot up for grabs in the opening sprint and MAJESTIC COLT (1.15) could provide us with a huge slice of each-way value.

Down to a career-low mark of 85, the seven-year-old is fancied to hit the frame at the very least and is preferred to Verhoyen and the consistent Ice Cold Alex.

NEW LONDON (3.55) looks the most likely winner of the diverted Cazoo St Leger at Doncaster.

The lightly-raced filly Haskay is the most likely source of an upset.

The big betting race on the extended card, the Coral Portland Handicap, looks as wide open as ever but I am really keen on the chance of SUNDAY SOVEREIGN (2.10).

The filly will once again have her ground here and gets the nod over Atalanta's Boy and Mekanah - the last named was desperately unlucky in the run at York last time out.

LEOPARDSTOWN DELIGHT: Luxembourg

Luxembourg a true Champ

LUXEMBOURG is now heading for a fascinating showdown with Baaeed in the Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe after his success in the Irish Champion Stakes at Leopardstown.

Always travelling effortlessly in the hands of Ryan Moore, Luxembourg proved too strong for Onesto, with Vadeni taking third.

Vadeni, admittedly, was denied a clear run but even had he seen daylight, the colt would not have caught the winner. Aidan O'Brien (above), winning the race for a record 11th time, said: "The plan and the dream was, if we could get him back, we'd mapped out three races for him."

"If we could get him to the Curragh (won last month) he could come here and if he came here, he could go to the Arc."

by CHRIS GOULDING

The colt is now 6-1 for the Arc with Coral and, like O'Brien, Moore has few doubts about Luxembourg's ability to see out a mile and a half at Longchamp in three weeks' time.

Connections of Baaeed, the 2-1 favourite for the Arc, have yet to give their colt the green light as they are waiting for suitable ground.

Testing conditions will rule him out in what is shaping up to be a must-have ticket.

FOLLOWING the death of The Queen, there was no racing in England, Wales and Scotland yesterday but the Brits enjoyed success at Leopardstown with I'm A Gambler (trained by Mark & Charlie Johnston) and Jadoomi (Simon & Ed Crisford).

BRITISH HORSE racing has been cancelled on the day of Queen Elizabeth II's funeral, Monday, 19 September. A British Horseracing Authority statement read: "British racing will not go ahead on Monday 19 September – the date of the funeral of Her Late Majesty The Queen. "This will give everyone involved in British racing the opportunity to mourn Her Late Majesty's passing and offer thanks for her contribution to our sport and the nation."

PAUL JACOBS' INSIDE LINE

BEST EACH-WAY

The return to a mile and quarter should really suit SEISAI (1.50) in the Blandford Stakes at the Curragh.

ONE TO SWERVE

Acomb Stakes winner CHALDEAN (12.30) could be vulnerable to the speed of Silver Knott in the Champagne Stakes at Doncaster.

NEXT WEEK

Off just a 1lb higher mark, Kevin Ryan's hugely popular BIELSA can retain his Ayr Gold Cup title on Saturday.

ANTE-POST

Following his successful comeback, ADAYAR looks an each-way bet to nothing at 8-1 against superstar Baaeed in the Champion Stakes.

CHANCE:
Alcaraz

Boy wonder Alcaraz wows fans in race to top of world

TEEN sensation Carlos Alcaraz will face Casper Ruud tonight for the US Open title – and the chance to become the youngest world No.1.

The Spaniard, 19, is already guaranteed to overtake his hero Rafa Nadal in the rankings.

And tonight he can also announce a new era of domination with his first Grand Slam singles victory.

Ruud, who revealed he has been inspired by his fellow Norwegian Erling Haaland, will also go to the top of the rankings with his first Major title in the intriguing showdown.

But Alcaraz, the second teenage male to make the US Open final after Pete Sampras in 1990, has the chance to establish himself as the sport's new superstar for the next decade. His speed around the court is matched only by the quickness of his smile after the big points.

Even American fans were cheering him during his sensational five-set semi-final win over home favourite Frances Tiafoe.

"It's the final of a Grand Slam, fighting for the No.1 in the world, something that I have dreamed about since I was a kid," said Alcaraz.

He has won three consecutive five-set matches totalling 13 hours and 28 minutes

to get to the final on 9/11.

Two of his wins – against Jannick Sinner in the quarter-finals and against Tiafoe – are in the top four of the longest matches in US Open history. Two finished way past his bedtime at after 2am.

But the tireless teenager, who retired injured in the quarter-finals here last year, said: "I feel great right now. A little bit tired. 'I feel good, Right now, though, I'm just so, so happy.'"

Ruud will go from world No.7 to world No.1 if he triumphs. He has won nine ATP Tour titles but lost the final of the French Open to Nadal in June.

"In the final in Roland Garros, Rafa obviously gave me a good beating," said the first Norwegian Grand Slam finalist. "I'm happy that it's not Rafa on clay."

Alcaraz leads their head-to-head meetings 2-0, including victory in the Miami Masters final in March.

But Ruud reckons even victory tonight will not make him more famous than Manchester City striker Haaland.

"He's had an unbelievable season so far," said Ruud. "We all hope he keeps going."

JOE SALISBURY and Neal Skupski are ready to team up for Great Britain back in Glasgow this week after clashing in the US Open final.

And both doubles specialists are set to face their regular partners in the Davis Cup. Salisbury and American Rajeev Ram retained their US Open title by beating Scouser Skupski and Dutchman Wesley Koolhof.

Now GB captain Leon Smith has to decide if he will pair up the world No.1 and No.3 doubles players for the Group D matches against USA, Kazakhstan and Holland.

Andy Murray and Dan Evans could also play doubles.

Londoner Salisbury, speaking in front of Ram, said: "I definitely think Neal and I can be a good team together. I think if we played together, everybody else will be in trouble!"

LECLERC BRINGS IT HOME

THE MAIN MON-ZA: Charles Leclerc and in his flying Ferrari (above)

CHARLES LECLERC put his Ferrari on pole position for the Italian Grand Prix to the delight of the Monza crowd.

Leclerc pulled out all the stops in his final run at the Temple of Speed to send the tifosi wild, with world champ Max Verstappen having to settle for second.

Verstappen will likely start in fourth, with the Dutchman one of nine of the 20 drivers punished for exceeding their allocated engine parts.

Carlos Sainz, Sergio Perez and Lewis Hamilton qualified third, fourth and fifth respectively but also face grid sanctions.

Hamilton will start from the back after taking on his fourth engine of the season.

George Russell was sixth but joins Leclerc on the front row while Lando Norris qualified in seventh but is set to start third in his McLaren.

Hamilton's yellow 44 on the side of his Mercedes has been turned black in honour of the Queen among a plethora of other tributes being paid up and down the paddock (right).

A one-minute silence was

staged ahead of practice on Friday, with another to follow on the grid before today's race.

The Italian president, Sergio Mattarella, will be present for the formalities.

Most of the 125,000 fans will be rooting for a Ferrari win with Leclerc out to stop Verstappen's run of four straight victories.

Verstappen is on course to secure his second world title in as many seasons after winning 10 of the 15 rounds staged so far. But Leclerc, who is 109 points behind the Red Bull driver, will be out to restore pride in a season when Ferrari have failed to deliver upon early promise.

The presence of John Elkann, the CEO of Ferrari, will intensify pressure on the team but Leclerc's superb lap and Verstappen's penalty will hand the Monegasque a head start.

"It is amazing," said

Leclerc. "It was not an easy qualifying session.

"I knew there was potential in the car and I knew with my last lap I had to put everything together and I managed to do it.

"I am very happy with the lap and with the performance. I really hope that we can do just like I did in 2019 by winning tomorrow."

Verstappen, subjected to a handful of boos, said: "Over one lap it may not be the best but for tomorrow it can be quite strong.

"It was a good lap, I enjoyed it, and it will be an interesting battle.

"I have to stay out of trouble then work my way forward."

Nyck de Vries was handed a late race debut after London-born Alex Albon was ruled out with appendicitis.

De Vries, 27, has taken part in three practice sessions this year, most recently with Aston Martin here on Friday.

The Dutchman performed commendably, qualifying ahead of Nicholas Latifi in the other Williams.

De Vries finished 13th, three places above Latifi, and he will also be propelled up the starting order.

Aston Martin's torrid term continued with Sebastian Vettel and Lance Stroll both eliminated at the first hurdle.

Arthur: I'm one step from the big shot

Eastender Yarde put him on the cusp of a shot at Artur Beterbiev, the WBC, IBF and WBO light-heavyweight champion, expected to take place early next year.

Arthur, who is set to face Argentine Walter Sequeira

But after a change of promoters – he has joined the Wasserman stable – he is adamant he won't have to wait too long.

He said: "It won't be long before I'm back in those fights. It will take one fight against a decent-ish name at domestic level to get back in the mix for world titles.

"Boxing is a mad-crazy sport, the fans are mad-crazy and the promotions are mad-crazy, so it just takes a good win and everyone forgets about a loss and what happened."

Boss hopeful of Warriors buyout

WORCESTER boss Steve Diamond watched his side take a seven-try hammering but revealed the club could have a new owner this week.

Henry Arundell, the teenage England wing, scored twice off the bench as Irish ran riot but Diamond insisted there could be light at the end of the tunnel for Warriors.

The Sixways outfit are in debt to HMRC and DCMS to the tune of £26million and face a winding-up order petition next month.

Owners Colin Goldring and Jason Whittingham are trying to offload the club and Diamond is hopeful they will be put out of their misery soon.

Diamond said: "In the next 72 hours there may come news of a potential investor. The owners are in the mire of trying to find someone to buy this club and invest into it."

"It is a boost but we don't want a false dawn. I have been around rugby for a long time and not too many people want to put their hand in their pocket and buy rugby businesses."

"If they have found somebody, great."

Arundell toured Australia in the summer but it was another winger Ollie Hassell-Collins, overlooked for the trip, who sparked Irish.

He scored once, had a hand in two other tries and put in a big defensive shift to help subdue Warriors when they were on the front foot early.

And head coach Les Kiss reckons Hassell-Collins could be in with a sniff for England.

Kiss said: "There has been another growth in Ollie in the off season."

"There was some nice stuff from him for sure. I feel with Ollie we're still scratching the surface. There's only upside to him all the way."

Main sponsor Adam Hewitt paid for the bus to bring the Worcester squad to Brentford and they were forced to wear last year's kit because the latest one is still at a supplier who has not been paid.

And it showed as they faded after a furious opening 10 minutes when they had all the ball but kept getting knocked back by Irish. Reality kicked in on 13 minutes when Hassell-Collins released centre Curtis Rona after an arcing run and he sent away flanker Ben Donnell.

Scrum-half Ben White added a second and Hassell-Collins went through three defenders to muscle over for the third.

Arundell emerged on 47 minutes and 40 seconds later had scored after he kicked Hassell-Collins' chip through and dived over the line for the bonus point.

Warriors rallied in the last quarter but tries from Will Joseph, hooker Agustin Creevey and Arundell's short range second finished them off.

Diamond added: "It was a bit more than just a rugby match. The country is in shock, we are a rugby club that has run out of money."

Steve rap as sloppy Tigers slip

LEICESTER boss Steve Borthwick admitted Tigers missed too many chances as they came down to earth with a bump, losing 24-20 to Exeter at Sandy Park.

Prop Patrick Schickerling piled over at the end to pull the game out of the fire.

Joe Simmonds' conversion nailed the win for Chiefs, who missed out on the play-offs for the first time in seven years last season.

Borthwick (right) said: "The boys are gutted to lose in the last play but we gave them one too many opportunities."

And Chiefs head coach Ali Hopper reckons there is more to come from the two-time Premiership winners.

Hopper said: "We had to go the full distance and ramped it up in the second half. The way we grew into the game and showed little bits of our attack and defence coming together was really pleasing."

Late scores from Alex Dombard and Joe Marchant at Kingston Park gave Harlequins a 40-31 win over Newcastle.

Falcons scored five tries, including two for hooker George McGuigan and one for Adam Radwan, to nab a bonus point.

Bristol beat local rivals Bath 31-29 at Ashton Gate.

Rory rides his luck to stay in touch on an emotional day

RORY MCILROY took full advantage of a major stroke of luck to boost his bid for a second BMW PGA Championship title following a moving tribute to the Queen at Wentworth.

A two-minute period of silence at 9.50am was impeccably observed, with DP World Tour chief executive Keith Pelley joining staff, players and caddies on the putting green in front of the first tee.

Defending champion Billy Horschel also revealed that he and his wife visited Windsor Castle to pay their respects when the tournament was put on hold on Friday, with Min Woo Lee doing likewise at Buckingham Palace.

McIlroy paid tribute to the Queen's "dignity, dedication and grace personified", adding: "I think growing up in Northern Ireland the Royal Family was part of our culture and you just sort of took it for granted that the Queen is the Queen."

"You don't realise that there's going to be kings and queens after that. She was such a steady figure for the entire country."

"I was very fortunate, I got to meet her a few years ago and she could not have been nicer. I have the picture of that in my house alongside my MBE, which I am very proud of as well."

"I thought it was the right decision for us to continue. I don't think we are disrespecting anyone by playing and celebrating what a life the Queen had."

McIlroy began his second round eight shots off the lead shared by Soren Kjeldsen and Viktor Hovland.

But he gradually made up ground with an eagle on the fourth and a birdie on the eighth taking him out in

32. Birdies on the 11th and 12th were followed by four straight pars before McIlroy pulled his drive on the 17th into the trees and towards the out of bounds, only for his ball to emerge a few seconds later on the edge of the fairway.

McIlroy went on to make birdie and said: "It was like a seven, nett four. I told Harry (Diamond, his caddy) I won't be complaining about my luck until at least next year. It was very lucky."

Another birdie on the 18th saw McIlroy match his lowest ever score at Wentworth, a 65 leaving him one off the pace alongside Thomas Detry and Rafa Cabrera-Bello.

Hovland, who added a 68 to his opening 64, won his second DP World Tour title in Dubai in January and would love to claim another of the circuit's biggest events, especially with Ryder Cup qualifying starting this week.

"I played here in 2019 shortly after I turned pro and I was kind of a little wowed about the experience," the world No.10 said.

"I'd watched a lot of European Tour events, but it was a little bit different showing up here the first time with so many people and just seeing the golf course for the first time after seeing it a little bit on TV."

"It was a cool experience that first time and I didn't play as well as I would have liked last year."

"But I've got a chance to win tomorrow. That would be awesome."

MAKING A MARC Sneyd inspires rout

MARC SNEYD masterminded a stunning victory for underdogs Salford to dump Huddersfield out of the play-offs.

Andy Ackers' late stunning try wrapped up a convincing win for the Red Devils, who came into the play-offs as the lowest ranked side.

Huddersfield, who had finished the season third, were hugely disappointing – but any side would have struggled against Paul Rowley's free-flowing entertainers.

The Salford coach said: "We are a good team with good players. We are resilient, adaptable and chilled. It was definitely a win for character and commitment."

"We may be a bit of a crazy gang at times but we have some talented individuals who take it very seriously and work hard and come together as a very good team."

Half-back Sneyd led the way with six goals and two try assists to set up a semi-final clash next Saturday away to champions St Helens.

Giants boss Ian Watson said: "We played real dumb and Marc Sneyd was able to play in a dinner suit on the back of it."

"The better team won, it is a really disappointing end to the season."

Rowley, who is on the shortlist to be named Coach of the Year, said: "It means the journey can continue."

"We were not ready for it to finish. But we are not treating this like winning the final – it is just another step."

SALFORD 28

By JULIE STOTT

The only downside for Salford is the significant loss for the semi-final of Man of Steel contender Brodie Croft with a head injury. Rowley added: "Brodie is gutted."

"But we've got to try and step over another rung in the ladder to enable him to come back for the final."

Full-back Ryan Brierley will also be sweating on his availability if a disciplinary hearing decides his sin-binning for a shoulder charge is worthy of a possible ban.

Salford started on fire, racing into a 16-0 lead after just 19 minutes with tries from Joe Burgess and Kallum Watkins, plus four Sneyd goals.

Brierley's spell in the sin bin failed to derail them and the visitors held the 16-point lead until half-time – and then stretched it early in the second.

Brierley raced on to a grubber kick from Sneyd – sparking verbal taunts from the Salford fans against their old boss Watson, who took them to the 2019 Grand Final – before hooker Ackers' late solo effort.

The club – whose owner Bernard Guasch has been banned and fined twice by the RFL for criticising referees in the past year – will now face an investigation, the RFL confirmed. Leeds coach

Rohan Smith said: "It was disappointing to see the ref getting things thrown at him and our players treated like that."

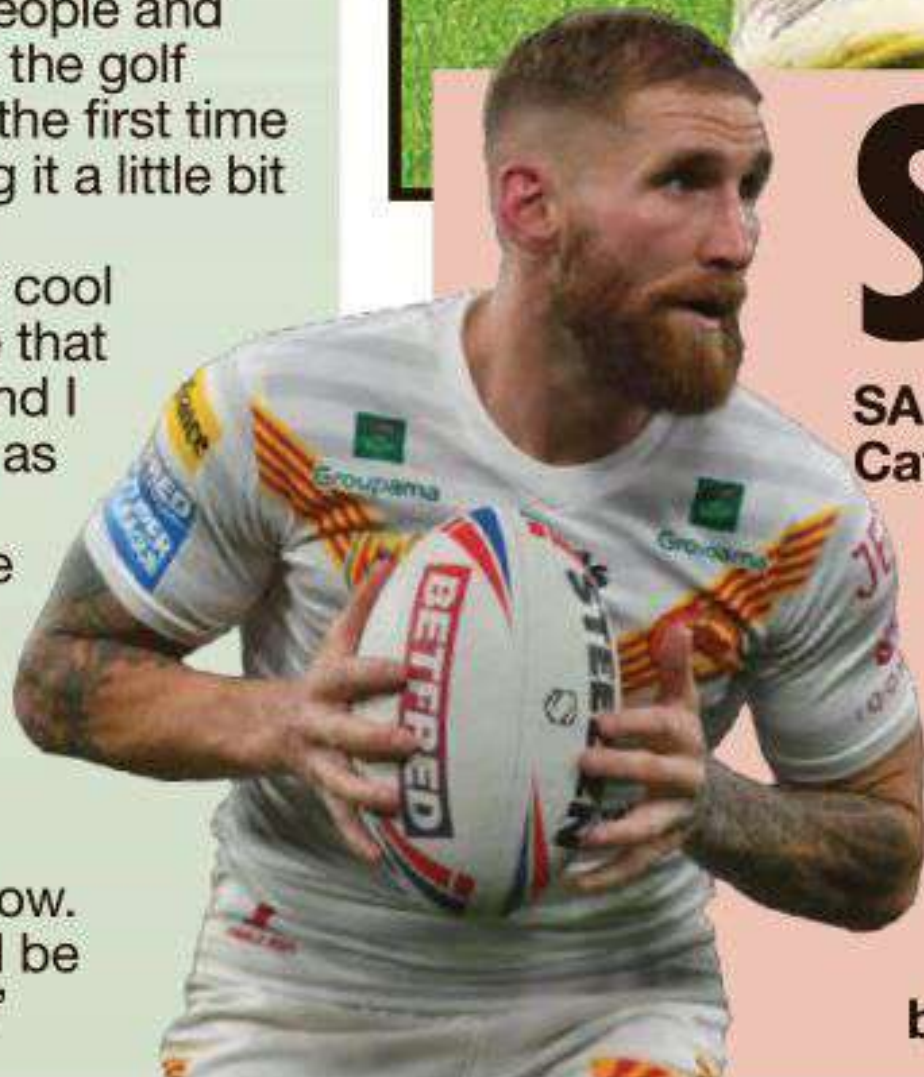

England star Tomkins (left) was also rapped for his part in Friday's 20-10 season-ending defeat.

Smith accused him of diving to try and win a penalty and also had a heated exchange with him at half-time.

The Aussie said: "Every decision he questioned. 'I was suggesting we just play footy and see who the best team is.'"

Catalans had Gil Dudson sent off and Micky McIlorum and Mitchell Pearce (twice) sin binned.

TRENT'S DOWN PECKING ORDER

TRENT ALEXANDER-ARNOLD likes to think that he's the best right-back in the land.

But the lad needs to wake up, because he isn't even the best right-back in Liverpool.

I doubt he does, but if Alexander-Arnold would like to see how a proper full-back operates at the highest level then he doesn't have far to look.

Across Stanley Park at Everton, a new star has been unearthed in the shape of Nathan Patterson.

Alan Shearer described the Scotland international's performance in last weekend's Merseyside derby as "immense" – and he wasn't wrong.

Patterson didn't put a foot out of place in what would have been the biggest club game of his career to date.

If he goes on to achieve what he's capable of, the Toffees will be forced to pay Rangers the grand total of £11million for his services.

He joined the Toffees at the start of 2022 and his signing might just prove to be the greatest achievement of Rafa Benitez's woeful seven-month stint in charge at Goodison Park.

Unlike Alexander-Arnold, 23, Patterson appears to relish the nuts and bolts of what is required from a defender – which is defending.

This appears to be a skill Alexander-Arnold doesn't have, or even worse, doesn't want to have. The fact has troubled England boss Gareth Southgate for quite some time, which is the reason he has been reluctant to pick him on a regular basis in his squads.

Injuries have been a factor, but since making his international debut back in 2018, Alexander-Arnold has gone on to win just 17 caps.

He is afforded God-like status at Anfield but let's not forget it was his error when switching off that allowed Real Madrid to win the Champions League final last season.

And just this week football fans took to social media to mock him for his dismal performance in Liverpool's brutal 4-1 thrashing at Napoli.

Football is fickle and times move on quickly but all of the above will not be lost on Southgate.

In less than two months' time he will have to pick his final squad for the World Cup – and will not be short of options in the right-back position.

Reece James is miles ahead of him in the pecking order, while Kyle Walker and Kieran Trippier are also expected to be on the plane to Qatar.

Back at Anfield, Jurgen Klopp has been left simmering after admitting Liverpool are in a difficult period.

He made the astonishing claim that his side have to 'reinvent' themselves, but if he genuinely means this then perhaps he could start with Alexander-Arnold. Irrespective of his supreme gifts going forward, having a right-back like him who struggles to defend appears somewhat self-defeating.

Should Klopp look at using Alexander-Arnold in a more advanced position on the right side of midfield?

Or should he show some real courage and drop him? Perhaps a kick up the backside is what he needs. Shocks to the system or the pricking of egos can often have a positive effect.

Because let's be honest, if Alexander-Arnold could learn how to love defending and bucks up his ideas, he would be one heck of an asset to both club and country.

You booze you lose at World Cup

STILL wondering whether or not to travel to the World Cup this winter?

Well consider the following information, because it might help you make your mind up.

Qatar's head of security and safety, Col. Jassim Abdulrahman Al Sayed (left) has made it clear supporters travelling to the World Cup won't be able to take alcohol into the country for personal consumption.

And while alcohol can be purchased in certain hotel bars, at extortionate cost, drinking in public can lead to fines of up to 3,000 riyal (£720), or even prison sentences of up to six months. It gets better.

Despite most parts of the world having a culture which involves alcohol consumption before, during and after games, the Qatari authorities have said that booze will be limited to designated areas only at stadiums, starting no earlier than 6.30pm on match days and fans will not be allowed to bring their own.

If you're looking for someone to blame, then blame former FIFA president Sepp Blatter.

It will be a World Cup like no other, that's for sure.

SINGLE-MINDED: Potter

Car chat boosted Potter's journey

by NEIL MOXLEY

GRAHAM POTTER'S footballing back story is a long one – but few Chelsea bosses would fondly reference the M6 as playing a part in it.

The club's new chief took up the role vacated by Thomas Tuchel last week, confirming a star that has been on an upwards trajectory for the past decade.

Success with Swedish minnows Östersunds was followed by a promising start amid the wreckage of Swansea City's relegation from the Premier League – potential that was quickly spotted by Brighton.

But, according to one of his pals, it was a 50-mile round trip between England's second city and Stoke that may have helped to form Potter's ideas.

Former Birmingham City skipper Ian Clarkson said: "He joined the club as an apprentice and we played together for a couple of years but I moved to Stoke and then Potts joined me up there.

"There were a few ex-Birmingham lads myself, Simon Sturridge, Paul Peschisolidi and Micky Gynn.

"There aren't many times anyone can say they've enjoyed a trip up the M6 from Birmingham to Stoke and back but there was never a dull moment in our car-share.

"The banter was flying around and Graham more than held his own.

"I'm convinced that the divergence of personalities and motivations of the players on that journey – we were all at different stages of our careers – helped him.

"Everyone is shaped by the experiences you have and I'd be amazed if he didn't pick up on the things we said, the way we said them and the contrasting emotions that we all had and he formulated his own ideas.

"One thing that's always stood out – he was never afraid to go his own way."

NIGEL BACKS GUNNERS FOR GLORY

ARSENAL should eye silverware AND a top-four push, says club legend Nigel Winterburn.

The Gunners started the season by winning their opening five games.

However, the impressive run of victories came to an abrupt end last weekend following a disappointing 3-1 defeat at Manchester United.

But the Emirates faithful will be hoping Arsenal can stay the course this season.

Mikel Arteta's men narrowly missed out on finishing in the Champions League spots last term. A late-season collapse meant arch rivals Tottenham pipped them to fourth.

But after a busy summer in the transfer market, Winterburn wants his former club to aim big this time around.

"Arsenal's aim is to get into the top four this season but I still think it'll be a massive fight," he said.

"Consistency is going to be key. They didn't show enough of that last season.

"In terms of where they are now, with who they've brought into the football club, for me, the squad is stronger.

"But we've got to add into that as this season they're playing Europa League football as well. A good, strong run in the Europa League and FA Cup is a must. They'll be hoping to get to all those finals, and on top of that, they will be expected to get into the top four."

Arsenal technical director Edu

Gaspar and Arteta had a busy transfer window. The club said goodbye to first-team regulars Alexandre Lacazette and Bernd Leno.

Hector Bellerin, Konstantinos Mavropanos, Lucas Torreira and Matteo Guendouzi were also off-loaded permanently.

To replace the outgoing faces, Gabriel Jesus and Oleksandr Zinchenko – a combined £75million from Manchester City – were brought in, along with Fabio Vieira for £34m from Porto.

USA goalkeeper Matt Turner and Brazil forward Marquinhos were also snapped up as Arteta looked to add more bodies into his squad.

William Saliba, meanwhile, is back after consecutive loan stints with Nice and Marseille.

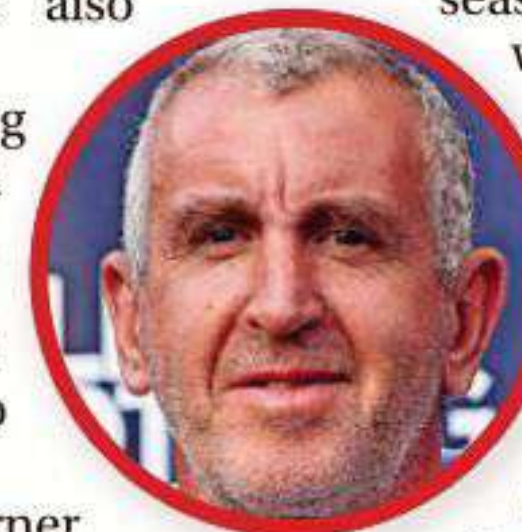

Winterburn (below) reckons his former club are in a good place.

"They are much stronger than last season," added the ex-full-back, who won three league titles and made more than 400 appearances with Arsenal.

"Saliba's come back at centre-half and they're stronger at full-back.

"Zinchenko can also play in the centre of midfield so that makes us stronger there, and they are definitely better up front with Jesus."

Mills tells Jesse to stop getting Marsch-ing orders

JESSE MARSCH has been told to stop annoying referees or risk turning officials and rival managers against Leeds United.

Marsch (left) was then sent off for berating referee Robert Jones in last weekend's 5-2 thumping at Brentford and must now serve a touchline ban.

Mills believes the fiery American must learn to keep his emotions in check. "Marsch needs to rein it in a bit so that people don't start talking about him for all the wrong reasons," he said. "He's a good coach with some very good ideas, but if he keeps going apoplectic on the touchline that's going to detract from what he's actually doing.

"That's what you don't want as a manager and I think there are already one or two Leeds fans saying, 'Is this really necessary?'

"Yes, you want passion but any manager needs to be calm under pressure to enable him to make the right decisions.

"Look at how Graham Potter conducts himself and the status he has elevated himself to. It doesn't make him any less passionate or less of a coach.

"Maybe Marsch has been sucked into the fans' mentality a bit. Losing it on the touchline can filter through to his players."

HOLD YOUR HANDS UP: Jurgen Klopp apologises to fans in Napoli

FORMER Liverpool striker Dirk Kuyt believes it's only a matter of time before Jurgen Klopp gets it right again at Liverpool.

And the Dutchman has warned Ajax that Tuesday night in the Champions League is the perfect occasion for Klopp's team to prove they are not a spent force.

Liverpool are reeling after a poor start to the Premier League campaign and painful European lesson at the hands of Napoli.

But Kuyt, who became a big favourite with the Kop during his six years on Merseyside, has told the Eredivisie champions that the Reds are never more dangerous than when they're on the back foot.

by SIMON MULLOCK

Kuyt, who is having a tough time himself having taken charge of ADO Den Haag in the summer, said: "I am confident that Klopp will get Liverpool back on track."

"He is still searching for the right mechanism in midfield and in attack."

"That doesn't surprise me after the departure of Sadio Mane to Bayern Munich and the arrival of Benfica striker Darwin Nunez. They are two completely different types of striker.

"If the club is having a bad time, like this period, the crowd often creates an atmosphere of invincibility."

"I would be very surprised if Ajax can play well against Liverpool under that intense pressure."

Kuyt (left) added: "At Anfield, I have seen even the greatest teams with the most experienced top players lose the plot."

"As a Liverpool player, you're boosted by the noise. Then an energy is released and there is no stopping you."

"On the pitch there is no escaping the noise. Because of the way the crowd reacts, you even become alert to a chance or when a dangerous situation threatens."

Liverpool have already been beaten by Manchester United and dropped points against Fulham, Crystal Palace and Everton this season.

And while Klopp's plans have been hit by injuries, the 4-1 battering in Naples was such a shock that questions are now being asked about the German's future at Anfield.

Kuyt is also under the cosh in Holland, with ADO struggling at the bottom end of the second division.

Kuyt said: "If Jurgen and I stick to our vision then the change will come."

"That is the most important thing to hold on to. Everyone now sees Paris Saint-Germain, Man City and Bayern Munich as the biggest contenders for the Champions League."

"But watch out because Liverpool will join that list of candidates. I'm convinced of that."

Martial said he has often been forced to play through the pain barrier – and his refusal to be a faker cost him a World Cup winner's medal after he was left out of the France squad for 2018.

Martial said: "For the last two seasons I have regularly played injured."

"But Solskjaer told me he needed me, so I played. But the coach did not bother to tell the media and obviously I ended up getting injured."

"I took it very badly. I had a feeling of injustice."

"You are being asked to sacrifice yourself for the team – and then you are dismissed. For me, it is almost treachery."

"That's what I hate. I can be blamed – but not for being fake."

Martial's attitude has been questioned regularly in the seven years since he was signed in a £36million deal from Monaco.

But in an explosive interview with France Football he said: "I scored 17 goals in my first season and had 13 assists and in the first part of the (2017-18) season I was top scorer."

"Then Jose Mourinho bought Alexis Sanchez and I hardly played anymore. It cost me my World Cup place. I should have been there."

Martial is seen as a key performer by new United boss Erik ten Hag.

But he has played just 45 minutes this season through injury.

He added: "I am not beyond reproach. When people say I lack consistency, it is true."

"It is a vicious circle. I am less effective when I play less – and then I play even less."

CALL-UP: Nick Pope

POPE LOOKING IN GOOD NICK

NICK POPE used to play in the shadow of the Wembley arch watched by a scattering of fans while keeping goal for Isthmian League side Harrow Borough.

Now the Newcastle stopper, 30, is set to be named this week in head coach Gareth Southgate's England squad for the Nations League double header against Germany and Italy.

Already a big hit with the Toon Army following a succession of outstanding performances since his £10million summer move from Burnley, he has come a long way from his days of playing in the lower leagues while on loan from Charlton.

Former Burnley boss Sean

Dyche, who signed him in 2016, said: "I thought to myself, he's massive, physically huge. Although he has a big frame his movement is razor sharp."

"He's an excellent all-round keeper who is obviously very much part of England's plans for the World Cup finals."

CAPTAIN MARVEL: Kearns (right) in action

MISSY BO KEARNS has spent a lifetime following in Liverpool players' footsteps.

As a childhood fan, the midfielder grew up idolising Steven Gerrard and started out with one of the Anfield legend's future successors in Curtis Jones.

Kearns, 21, and Jones played together at junior side Mossley Hill before graduating to become standard bearers for the Reds' women's and men's teams respectively.

She said: "To see us both progress, he's the club's youngest men's captain and I'm the youngest women's captain ever, it's a proud moment for me."

"I know all the sacrifices I've had to put in so he's had to do the same – the late nights training and then going to school when you're a kid. It's not easy and to see it pay off, it's worth every single minute."

Kearns has reaped the rewards from putting in those hard yards as Liverpool prepare to kick off their first Women's Super League campaign for three years at home to Chelsea next Sunday.

Working under Matt Beard, who won successive WSL titles as manager in 2013 and 2014, Kearns is relishing the prospect of stepping back into that spotlight.

"We're back where we belong, where we should be and it's going to be exciting to see where we're actually at," she added.

"I think we'll perform against some of the big teams and we've got a good enough squad to compete. I'm looking forward to it."

DOUBLE V-IZZ-ION

IZZY CHRISTIANSEN is setting her sights on more than just a new Everton contract.

The England midfielder's deal expires next summer but she has outlined her target to help Brian Sorensen's side secure a long-awaited return to the Champions League.

"I joined Everton when I was 14 and made my first-team debut in the Champions League," said Christiansen, 30 (inset) who conquered Europe's elite with Lyon in 2019.

"Those two words are what I want to get Everton closer to again. I see Everton being a team which should be in the Champions League."

Russo on a roll

ALESSIA RUSSO is backing the women's domestic game to receive a sizeable boost after England's heroics this summer.

The Manchester United striker will be one of the star turns in this year's WSL after scoring four goals in the Lionesses' march to the Euro 2022 trophy.

They included a stunning backheel in the semi-final against Sweden and, with nine WSL goals last season, Russo has established herself as one of England's brightest young stars.

She wants to see a knock-on impact on the terraces after England broke new ground by beating Germany.

Russo said: "After what we've done, we hope the game keeps progressing in the right direction and that we keep breaking records."

"(We want) more and more people coming to games, more and more recognition around the women's game."

HER MAJESTY

SUCH JOY

THE reign of Queen Elizabeth II – and its extraordinary length – has no equal on these islands.

It is hard to appreciate what 70 years on the throne entails yet, looking at some of the dramatic changes within football – our national sport – over the period is a decent way to start.

So, with football on pause this weekend, here we rewind and reflect on the history of our Beautiful Game from 1952 to 2022.

Perhaps, the most significant difference of all to occur in those seven decades is the simple fact that women can now legally play football... in a stadium.

That was not the case when Elizabeth was crowned but the law was binned in 1971. Hence, there is some touching symmetry in the timing of our Lionesses' summer success at the Euros.

The approach of those FA big-wigs was hardly in keeping with our Queen, proud head of the Commonwealth and globally-respected state figure.

The FA took neither the World Cup nor the European Cup seriously. Quite the reverse.

England did not even feature at a World Cup until 1950 – and due to a lack of preparation were knocked out in the early rounds every time until 1966.

How

EURO STARS: Bobby Charlton lifts the European Cup in '68

by HARRY PRATT

mad is that? And it was the same with no English club competing in the inaugural European Cup of 1955-56 – on the orders of the Football League.

Twelve months later, ignoring that command, Matt Busby led champions Manchester United into battle against the cream of the continent.

From the Munich Air Disaster in 1958 to lifting the trophy 10 years later at Wembley, the Busby Babes became footballing legends. By which time the game, home and abroad, was being transformed into something akin to today.

Before then, the most a player could earn was £20-a-week. Inconceivable given the current average

Many also say the 1970 World Cup finals was the first football they saw in glorious technicolour. A bit blurry, perhaps, but a vivid sign of the picture ahead.

After Liverpool, supported by Nottingham Forest and Aston Villa, took up the European Cup winning baton in the late 70s and early 80s, it was the 90s that saw the English elite game explode.

The Premier League, backed by then-new satellite channel Sky, launched in 1992 and has boomed into a billionaires' paradise with ever-increasing broadcasting rights fuelling the business.

The modernisation of the game over the past 40 years especially has been incredible. From boggy pitches made famous by FA Cup giant-killings of yesteryear to the crisp fields of finely manicured grass top stars play on today, the game is almost unrecognisable.

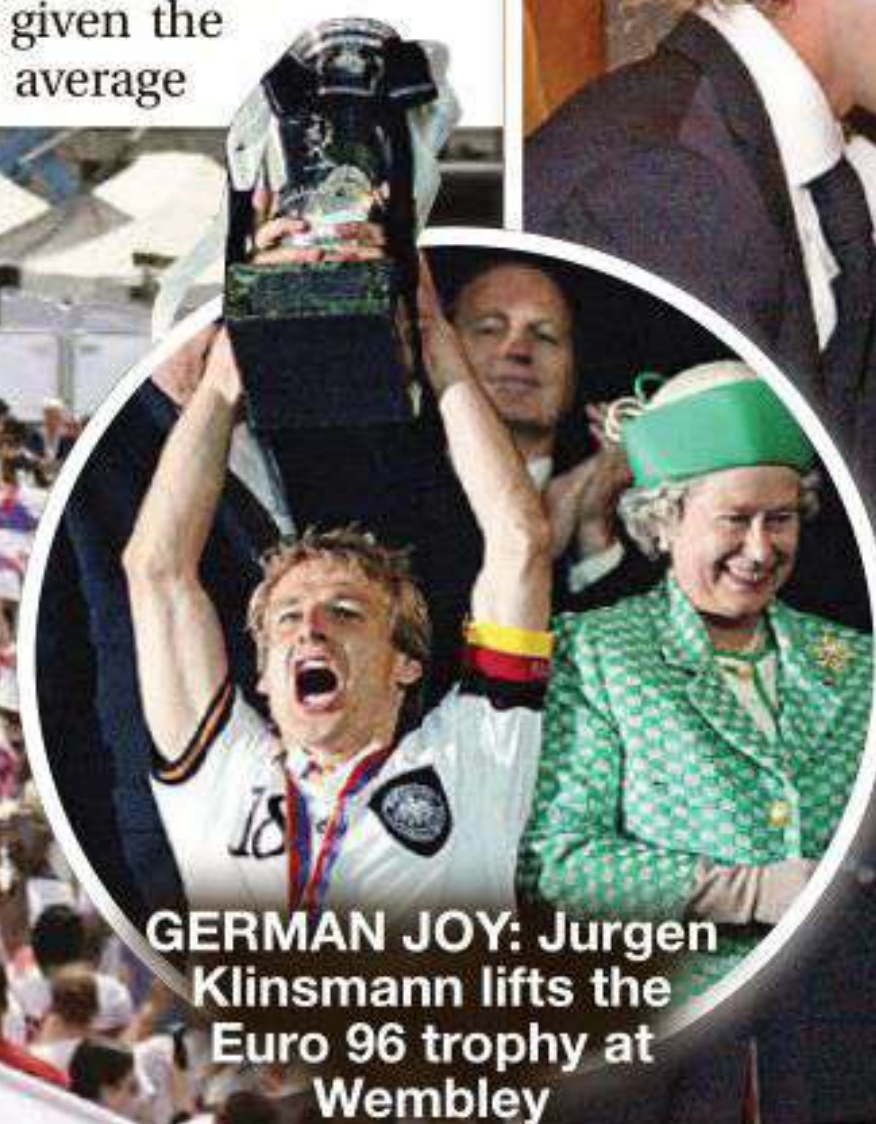

The ever-improving standards of not only play but facilities available to players and clubs has seen a transformation of the game few could have predicted.

Rule changes have come and gone too, with the laws around subs one of the largest changes in recent years, along with the introduction of VAR.

Whether that will work in the long run or not is still up for debate, with fans and players pining for the old days of human error being okay and the joy of celebrating as soon as a goal goes in.

But there is no stopping the forward march of progress and this age of football looks set to be defined by technology and its influence on the game we love.

The forward march of progress... I think Queen Elizabeth II would have liked that.

TRIBUTE: Gianfranco Zola

by SIMON MULLOCK

CHELSEA legend Gianfranco Zola has revealed how he was left stunned when the Queen called him "the great Italian footballer".

Zola, 56, took to social media on Friday to pay tribute to Her Majesty when her death was announced.

The former forward became a huge admirer of the Royal Family when he signed for Chelsea in 1996 – and was later awarded an OBE for his services to English football.

But he still remembers the day he met the Queen and Prince Philip at a gala dinner hosted by the British Embassy in Rome in November 2004 and the thrill he got when she spoke glowingly of his talents.

Zola said: "When I was introduced to her, she told me, 'The great Italian footballer'. I was over the moon. I did not expect such recognition in her presence."

"I have an indelible memory of the meeting and her sublime bearing."

"She was a splendid lady, never banal, always informed on any subject. She whispered but caught you with her eyes. She had unique grace."

"I spent seven years with Chelsea and I immediately understood the extraordinary magnetism the Queen had with her subjects."

Zola, who still has a home in London, has a photograph of his meeting with the monarch on his fireplace.

The scroll of honour for his OBE names him as: "The most enduring foreign player in the history of Chelsea, an excellent football ambassador and the ideal model for young fans."

Zola joined Chelsea from Parma for £4.5million. He became an instant Stamford Bridge hero, helping the Blues win two FA Cups, the League Cup, the European Cup Winners' Cup and the European Super Cup.

out on the ground singing the national anthem but this was extra special because of what has happened.

"It's been an incredibly sad couple of days. The Queen's passing is so sad not just for the nation but for the world.

"She was someone who dedicated her life to the country and who we can take incredible inspiration from. It's great to be able to walk out on the field to honour the memory of the Queen.

"We know how much the Queen loved the sport and I was pleased the sport should carry on today.

"I wasn't personally involved in discussions whether the game should resume today, that's a bit above my level. But sport brings people together and it is something everybody enjoys.

"We have tried to make sure they do enjoy it this summer with the way we have played.

"It's such a short game but everything we do out there over the remaining days will be aimed at trying to still get a result.

"We don't do draws."

Lisbon. UEFA has yet to say if there will be a minute's silence before kick-off.

Both Manchester United and West Ham marked the monarch's death last Thursday with a minute's silence that evening, while Arsenal paid their respects at half-time during their game at FC Zurich.

Thirty games in the EFL will also be played on Tuesday evening – with every club paying tribute to the Queen before kick-off.

The authorities expect all supporters to behave in a respectful and dignified manner to capture the mood of a nation in mourning.

Chelsea, Celtic, Manchester City, Arsenal, Hearts, Manchester United and West Ham are also in European action in midweek.

The Premier League will return on Friday night at Aston Villa and Nottingham Forest.

There are also games scheduled on the same evening in the League of Wales and the NIFL Premiership in Northern Ireland.

FOR KING Ollie leads the way on a

ENGLISH cricket paid an emotional tribute to the late Elizabeth II as international sport resumed in this country on a tear-filled, historic day in South London.

As Charles III was being proclaimed the new King – just a few miles from where Jimmy Anderson was preparing to run in to bowl in the Third Test – a full and sombre crowd at the Oval was able to display its grief at the loss of their Queen.

A mournful atmosphere enveloped this famous old ground as thousands came to see the third day of the contest with South Africa – but more to pay their respects to someone who had reigned supreme for 70 years.

England and South Africa players donned black arm-bands and attempted to show that cricket life was carrying on as normal in the long history of a sport which had such strong connections with the Queen.

Incredibly, she had been on the throne long enough to witness three quarters of all the Tests ever played.

But it was certainly no ordinary day. And those competing out in the middle knew they would be merely a sideshow.

Stuart Broad admitted: "It's been a challenging time and we were all happy to resume the game.

"We didn't know what would happen but it was good to get back out there. It's been an emotional day.

"Singing the anthem was amazing and the atmosphere in the ground was special. We just wanted to honour the Queen in the best way possible."

The priority was clearly to honour Elizabeth II – a regular visitor here over the decades – the best way they could.

Even the sun poked through the dark clouds to shine some brightness down on a venue which lay just a few miles from where our longest-serving monarch was brought into the world 96 years ago.

New ECB chairman Richard Thompson defended the decision to recommence the Test while football bosses postponed all their fixtures for the weekend.

He said: "It has been a frantic few hours. We instinctively felt it was inappropriate to play on the Friday so soon after her death and then again discussed whether we should play on the Saturday but DCMS and Sport England were very supportive and said if you want to play then play.

"It was unanimous, including the players, that this game should go ahead."

Captain Ben Stokes and his players wanted the opportunity to show their respect and took part in a Guard of Honour with the South Africa players, umpires and members of the military observing a minute's silence which was accompanied by a poignant single chime sounding from a bell struck by Irish Guards NCO Robert Brockelsby.

Tears welled up in some spectators' eyes as soprano Laura Wright first sang the South African anthem, before bursting forth with an up-to-date a capella performance of God Save The King as England cricketers became the first national side to do so in the new reign.

There was also moisture in some of the players' eyes as they belted out the anthem with a little more gusto than normal. Bowler Ollie Robinson admitted: "We had to remind ourselves what we were going to sing when the anthem came on! There were a few nervy characters walking down the stairs.

"It felt a very special morning to be part of. We have never experienced anything like it. You could feel so much respect from everyone."

A picture of the Queen filled the giant screen during lunch and tea breaks on the land owned by the Duchy of Cornwall.

Thompson said: "I think everyone choked up when God Save the King started. Hairs stood up on your neck and there were a lot of people crying. It was historic for so many reasons."

On the field, the crowd witnessed another frantic day of summer Test action with 17 wickets falling as the game moved forward rapidly.

After making up for lost time bowling out South Africa for 118, England capitulated themselves to 154-7 when bad light forced an early close, a lead of 36 runs.

Robinson (5-49) and Broad (4-41) were the stand-out England bowlers. Sussex ace Robinson bowled with accuracy and conviction, removing Dean Elgar, Keegan Peterson, Kyle Verreynne and Wiaan Mulder. And with Jimmy Anderson and Broad weighing in with wickets, the Proteas collapsed to 36-6 at one stage.

They recovered a little but Robinson completed his five-wicket haul by dismissing Marco Jansen for a top score of 30.

Broad finished the job with the wicket of Keshav Maharaj and Anrich Nortje.

In response, Pope struck an impressive 67 but when Joe Root fell for 23 England lost five for 67, with debutant Harry Brook falling for 12, Stokes and Broad both making six.

DURING her 70 years on the throne Her Majesty travelled more widely than any other monarch in British history. From State visits to Commonwealth tours, she was the queen of diplomacy and during her time met a long list of high-profile world leaders - often in the company of her husband the Duke of Edinburgh.

The Queen's many trips included her famous visit to South Africa in 1995, where she was met by President Nelson Mandela, and her 11-day tour of Australia in 2011, when she visited Perth, Canberra, Brisbane and Melbourne. She met Aboriginal people and went for a boat trip on the Brisbane River.

OLD WORLD..

Her Majesty: Never far

THE QUEEN had quite the sense of humour - as these hilarious snaps over the years show. King Charles III paid tribute to his "beloved mother" following her death and described the loss as the "greatest sadness."

In recent years, the Queen gave more responsibilities to Charles, with her eldest son becoming a stalwart figure by her side at public events, or appearing for her at events like the Jubilee celebrations earlier this year where he affectionately called her Mummy. These snaps show the pair giggling together, as well as the Queen enjoying more laughs on royal visits where she couldn't resist a little joke. One such time, pictured above right, involved a fit of giggles from Her Majesty's grand-daughter-in-law, Kate, as the pair shared a chuckle whilst watching a children's sporting event during a visit to Vernon Park, Nottingham, in 2012.

A racing certainty that

Take the

for her love of horses, it was said that the Queen always had a copy of the Racing Post newspaper tucked into her daily correspondence. And at Her Majesty's holiday home in Sandringham, the love is proven as a life-size sculpture of her racehorse Estimate is on proud display. The Queen's enduring love of horse racing was a rare glimpse into the woman behind the crown. Racing was said to give her a "diversion" from her role as monarch, and her contribution as an owner and breeder was marked by her being inducted into the British Champions Series Hall of Fame in 2021. Horses were a feature of her life from early childhood. She learned to ride on a Shetland pony called Peggy, a fourth birthday present from her grandfather King George V.

OVER the years the Queen happily shared some of her sweetest family moments for the world to enjoy. Photos of her as a mother, grandmother and great-grandmother were all shared over her seven decades of service. Queen Elizabeth II was born on April 21, 1926, and during her 96 years became a mum of four children - Prince Charles, Princess Anne, Prince Andrew and Prince Edward. She was also grandmother to eight grandchildren and a great-grandmother of 12. The Queen enjoyed spending time away from her royal duties with them, be it on special occasions, annual holidays such as her summer break in Balmoral or horse rides at Windsor Castle.

'We seem to know what each other is thinking'

As co-hosts Alison Hammond and Dermot O'Leary return to This Morning, they share the secrets of their fantastically fun friendship

Fridays are filled with laughter again, as Dermot O'Leary and Alison Hammond return to the This Morning sofa for their weekly presenting slot.

The pair hosted the show for two weeks in July before heading off for a summer break. "We have so much fun together that doing it every day for those two weeks was a blast," laughs Dermot, 49.

Their return promises to feature more celebrity chats, great guests and giggles aplenty from the pair, who no longer have to sit as far apart as they did during the height of Covid. "It's so lovely to be free and to be sitting closer together now," says Alison, 47.

Here, the co-hosts reveal what they got up to this summer, what it's like working together on This Morning and what they message each other when they are apart...

Hi, both! What did you do with your time off this summer?

Alison: I went to Disney in America with my son Aidan, we had been really looking forward to that – such fun.

Dermot: I've been doing my house up.

Having a giggle on This Morning

What do you miss about each other when you're not filming?

Alison: The familiarity. He's the longest boyfriend I've had in my life.

Dermot: Yeah, you do miss the camaraderie, especially in the make-up room at the start of the day – that trust and knowing that we take the ps out of each other, but we love each other. I just love coming to work and doing live telly, and now we've got to know each other more intimately.

Alison: Not too intimately, babes!

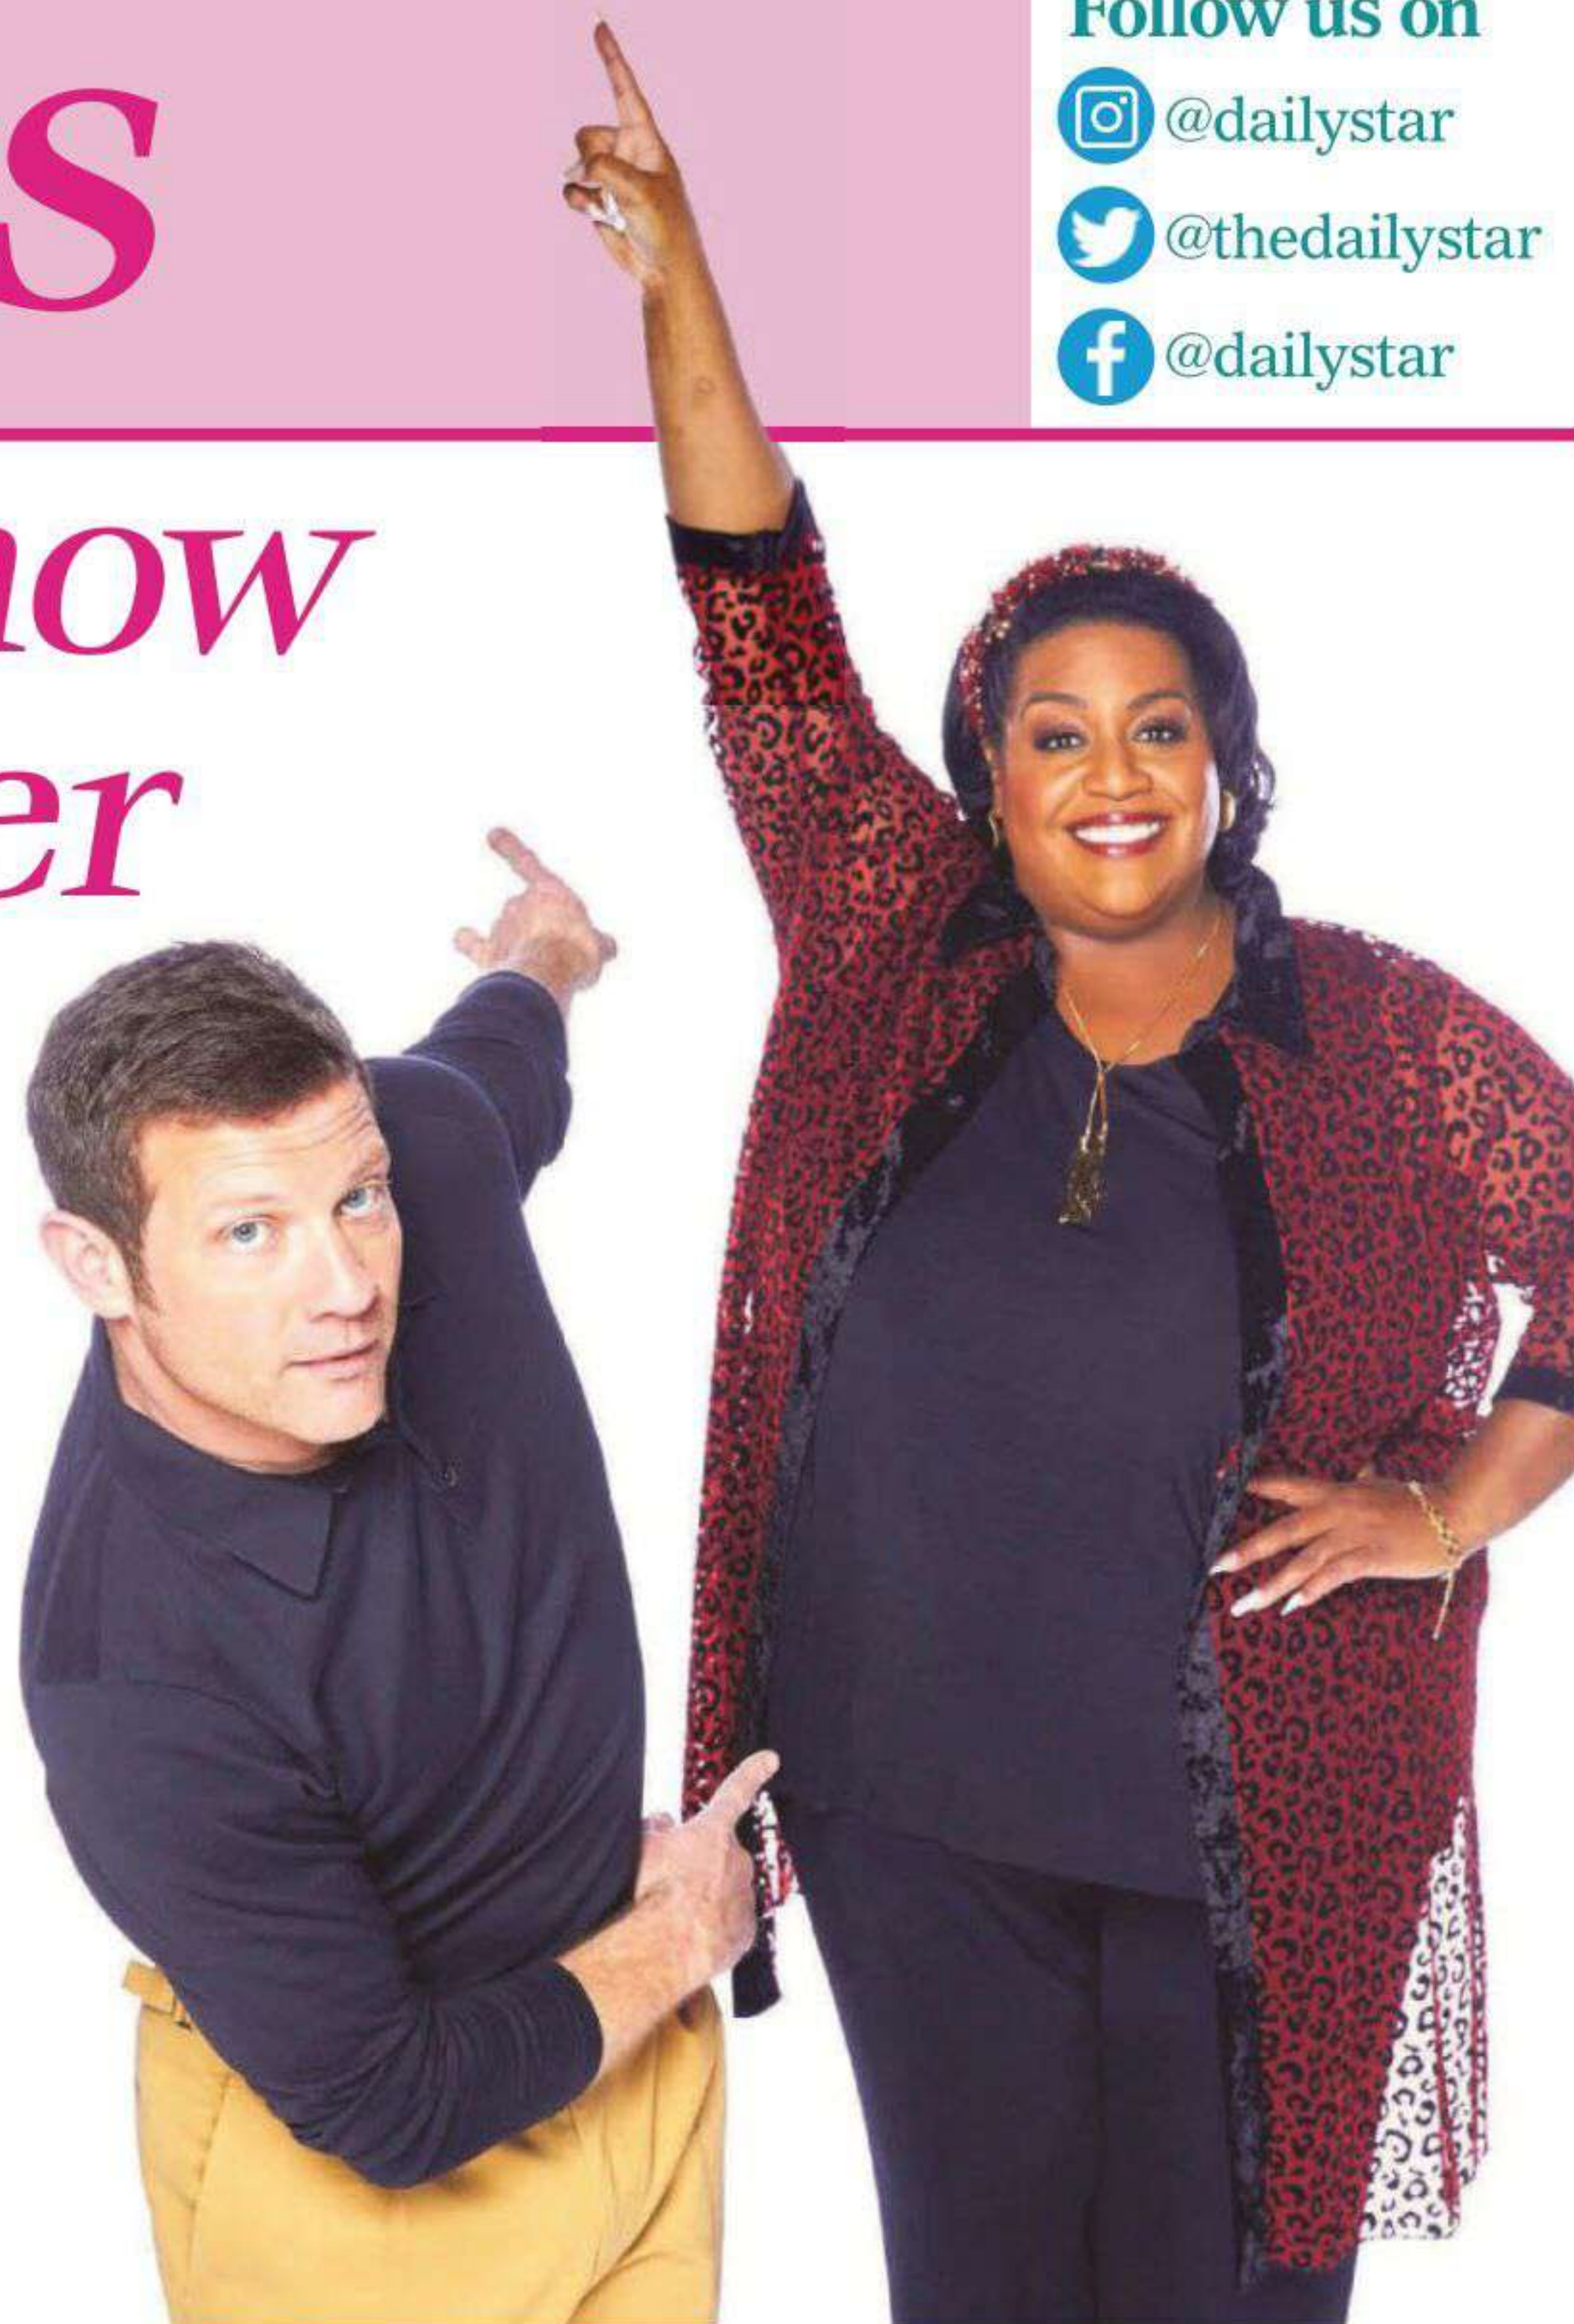

Is it a shock getting back into the early morning routine of filming This Morning?

Alison: Yeah, it does take a while! I remember last September and feeling like we're starting again. I was getting butterflies, thinking, "Do I still know what I'm doing?" There's lots going on in your earpiece and it's getting used to that again.

Dermot: Yeah, there is a little feeling, but I guess it's all about the prep as well, that helps.

What's the first thing you do when you arrive at the studio?

Alison: I have a bottle of water and because I usually arrive first, I get us both a green juice and order Dermot his box of bacon!

Dermot: We do have a little routine going. The moments in the make-up room together are really special – we love catching up before the show.

Alison: Yeah. And as time has gone on we now seem to know what each other is thinking. I know what stories he'd like to discuss.

Do you send each other messages when you're not at work?

Dermot: It's usually silly stuff. All rubbish! Normally gossip and fun.

Alison: I usually send him lots of selfies of me! And food recipes, funny gifs... This gif of a girl falling asleep was sent because he knows when we get sent the briefs for the show, sometimes they come through late the night before and I've been known to fall asleep reading them!

Alison and Dermot are on This Morning on Fridays at 10am on ITV

'I can't imagine Autumn not having a sister'

Model Danielle Lloyd reveals all about adding a final baby to her family and her feelings on being "dragged" into the Wagatha Christie trial

Danielle Lloyd made no secret that she longed for a girl to add to her brood after becoming a mum to four boys.

She even considered jetting to Dubai and using gender selection for her fifth baby. But, after becoming pregnant last year, her dreams came true when she gave birth to her daughter Autumn Rose in November.

And while she hinted at the time that she might change her mind about not having any more babies, the 38-year-old has revealed she's trying for number six – specifically a sister for Autumn.

Danielle, who is also mum to boys Archie, 11, Harry, 10, and George, eight, from a previous relationship, and four-year-old Ronnie with husband Michael O'Neill, reveals how she made the decision.

"When we first had a little baby it was all perfect and then we were like, 'Oh my God, I can't imagine not having this again,' she explains.

"Then you go through the stage of, 'Oh my God, I'm not going to have any sleep, I'm not having any more.' And then once they start sleeping, I'm like, 'I could do this again.'"

She continues, "I've gone through ups and downs and I just can't imagine Autumn not having a little sister to grow up with. I just think it's nice to have sisters close together so they've always got each other's backs. I'm thinking more of her than me."

When we ask how hubby Michael feels about adding another baby to their family, Danielle bursts into laughter.

"He just goes with the flow. What does one more matter?" she giggles.

"When I was saying it to Michael, I think I'd had a few wines. I think he thought I was messing around, but I wasn't. I still think he thinks I'm messing around. Even with Autumn, he was like, 'You didn't tell me we were trying.' And I was like, 'Didn't I?'"

She adds, "I love the thought of having two girls. Because I've got so many boys, Autumn will be overrun with brothers. So I'll use the babydust method again."

Danielle is referring to the book The Babydust Method: A Guide To Conceiving A Girl Or A Boy by Kathryn Taylor, which claims that conceiving around ovulation can help determine the gender of your baby.

"You have to test when you ovulate and basically have sex two days before you ovulate," Danielle explains. "And then the female sperm lasts longer than the male sperm. The male sperm dies so when the egg comes down in ovulation there's only female sperm left."

"You usually know when you're going to ovulate," she adds. "It's weird, I can feel it. I get sharp pains. When the egg comes out, I can actually feel it, although not everyone can."

Since going public, Danielle says she's had so many people message her about sex selection that she sees herself as a bit of a "guru" on the subject.

"They're messaging me on a daily basis. I'm like a baby sex guru! It's quite nice really because, while I know some people find it weird or selfish, a lot of women are interested but feel too scared to talk about it."

While she hails the method as a success after conceiving the girl she always wanted, we can't help wondering how she'd feel if she became pregnant with another son.

"I haven't even thought about it," she admits. "It'll still be a beautiful baby. What will be, will be."

There's no doubt the subject's a controversial one and Danielle has previously spoken about the flak she's received for wanting to determine her baby's sex. But the model and former Miss GB isn't fazed by the prospect of more negative comments.

"Honestly, I couldn't give a st what people think and I mean that in the nicest possible way," she says. "People's opinions don't bother me. I couldn't care less. It's my life and I'm going to live it how I want. I'm not asking people to pay for my kids. I look after them, they have a nice life and I love them all. Obviously [some] people aren't fortunate enough to be able to have babies, it must be hard for them, but that's not my fault. I can only live my life."

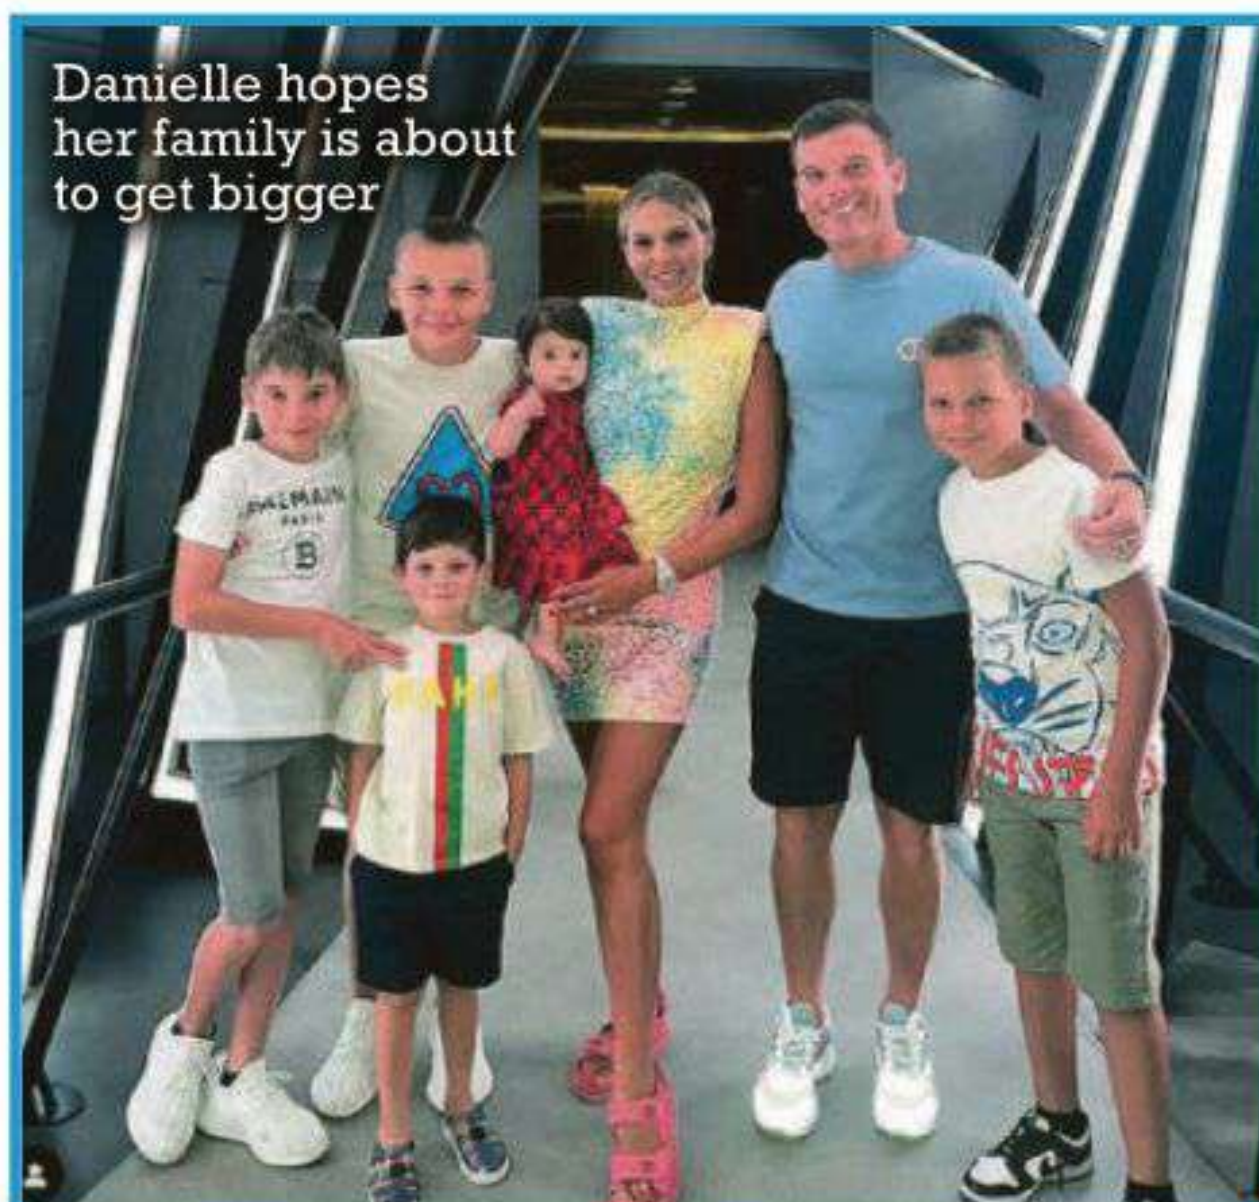

When we ask her about the timescale for her next baby, she reveals her psychic told her she'd know by October "whether I'm 100% having one or not". And she's already picking out names, with River topping the list.

"I'm really maternal, I just love kids," she adds. "Although they drive me insane, I just feel like I was meant to be a mum. Since having Autumn I've got even more maternal. I think it's because she's a girl and I get to do different stuff with her. The boys are all older now. They don't want to come out of their bedrooms, they leave [their] boxers lying around. She, on the other hand, is cute and girly. I'm sure she'll want to do ballet and stuff like that."

So, the obvious question is, will six be the final number?

"It's an even number," she says, "so yeah! I've got no room left in the inn otherwise."

Danielle hopes her family is about to get bigger

The boys having fun at home

'People message me on a daily basis, I'm like a baby sex guru!'

Danielle is in the process of having her West Midlands home renovated to cater for her expanding family. She even had a pool installed in their back garden this summer so her kids could enjoy the heat wave.

"I was drunk and I said to Michael, 'Let's get a pool.' Literally the next week someone was digging a hole in my garden – no thought went into it! It nearly finished me and Michael off. It was even more stressful than having a baby. We had builders here, we were dealing with landscapers, and obviously paying for it."

We can see the results for ourselves as it's hard to pry the children away from the water during our shoot. But as soon as Autumn needs attention, the kids are there to care for her.

"They're actually really helpful," she says of her boys. "They hold her, feed her and play with her, too."

Danielle also insists her nine-month-old daughter looks just like her youngest son. "She's like a mini-Ronnie with a wig," she laughs. "She's going to be a tomboy, I think, like I was as a kid. She's probably going to play in mud with the boys. But I hope she'll also do girly things like dance. I'm obsessed with dressing her up."

The bond between Danielle and her daughter is clearly close and Danielle reveals that Autumn slept in her bedroom with her for seven months.

"I wouldn't put her in her own room," she says, "and it got to the point where I couldn't because I was so used to her being there. The first night I put her in her own room she really cried. I was like, 'I can't do this. I'm putting her back in with us.' But now she's in her own room and sleeping so much better. I'm obsessed with her. I'm obsessed with them all."

Naturally, things can be hectic at home, but she tells us it hasn't affected her relationship with Michael, 35. "It's been quite chilled," she says. "Ronnie was his first and he was hands-on but I want to do everything with Autumn and because he lets me, there aren't any arguments. He's such a good dad, he does everything for them. He takes them to school and football. I'm really lucky."

The couple got married in Dubai in 2019. So are there any plans to renew their vows?

"I said we should renew them after five years but Michael said we'd do it in 10. Obviously, we've just had a big expense with the pool and if we have another baby it's going to be stressful. So maybe we'll wait until 10 years. I might do a crazy Vegas one!"

So how do the busy parents keep the spark alive? "You just have to do it when you can!" she says. "Be spontaneous, I don't think you can plan that sort of thing when you've got five kids because usually one of them is in between us!"

Like us, Danielle was gripped by the Wagatha Christie trial in which Rebekah Vardy sued Coleen Rooney over claims Rebekah was leaking stories to the press about her.

The judge ruled in Coleen's favour and Danielle, who found herself drawn into proceedings when she was criticised in several of Rebekah's texts during the trial, couldn't be more pleased for her friend.

"I spoke to Coleen and she thanked me for the support, which was really nice," she says. "I'm just so happy she got justice."

"And the people who got named – like me, Peter [Andre] – I didn't want to be dragged into it. There was no need for some of those text messages. They contained some really nasty, catty comments. She [Rebekah] said they were private text messages and no one was ever meant to see them. But I don't say things like that about people, even in private. I'm not a nasty person. I found it quite hurtful."

Danielle's miscarriage from 2019 was also detailed in the shocking messages, which were produced as evidence in court. It's something that brought back horrible memories.

"I didn't want people discussing that sort of thing. I'd just had Autumn as well," she says. "It just wasn't nice and made me really emotional. I'm quite a strong person, but it triggered some bad memories."

Danielle also waded in on Rebekah's post-verdict TV interview. And it's fair to say she wasn't impressed.

"It was shocking. I think she was looking for sympathy. Some of it was laughable. I think she should leave the subject alone now and accept the judge's decision. I just laughed when she said, 'If I saw Coleen, I'd take her for a coffee.' I said, 'There's more chance of Boris Johnson being Prime Minister again!'"

Beauty editor Laura Mulley shares this week's must-haves, trends and tips

BODY BEAUTIFUL

Like Google, Zumba and Adele, Bio-Oil is a name that needs no further explanation. The skincare oil launched in 1987 and quickly became the go-to for scars and stretch marks, with only a handful of other launches from the brand in the years since.

Now, however, it's making waves again with a new Body Lotion, from £14.99, packing skin-replenishing oils and vitamins into a lightweight, fluid moisturiser. Is this another future classic in the making?

BEAUTY

JUST A SPLASH

Toners have upped their game recently. Gone are the astringent, alcohol-heavy liquids of the past, and instead here's a new wave of smart solutions all packed full of skincare benefits.

One of the newest is Fenty Skin Fat Water Hydrating Milky Toner Essence, £38, a creamier, more hydrating sister to Fenty's original Fat Water, containing hyaluronic acid, niacinamide and tamarind extract to bolster the skin's moisture barrier.

SPOT ON

Maker of cute, candy-coloured skincare Glow Hub has just made its first foray into the world of make-up with Under Cover, £14.

The highly pigmented cream concealer doesn't just camouflage blemishes, it helps to banish them for good too – thanks to a formula that contains spot-shrinking salicylic acid and tea tree extract. Find it in an impressive 26 shades.

EASY ON THE EYE

I'll rave to anyone who'll listen about the difference in my eyelashes since discovering RevitaLash – regular use has left them looking almost as good as professional extensions.

Now, there's a new serum launching on Monday, and it's specially designed for sensitive eyes. RevitaLash Advanced Sensitive Eyelash Conditioner, £99, encapsulates its lash-boosting ingredients to deliver them gradually, to reduce risk of irritation. In studies, 98% of users said their lashes looked more healthy after eight weeks of use.

Professor who got a stranger to help murder his lover in sick sex fantasy

Wyndham Lathem liked drugged-up group romps and had a fetish for knives

Professor Wyndham Lathem was a highly respected microbiologist. His research – which partly focused on the bubonic plague, commonly known as the Black Death – had made him an expert on how pathogenic bacteria cause diseases and in 2017 he was a professor at the prestigious Feinberg School of Medicine at Northwestern University in Chicago.

Lathem was openly gay and dating Trenton Cornell-Durenleau, 26, who was building a reputation as a hair stylist. Things had started casually after they met on Grindr, but after a while their “friends with benefits” arrangement had grown into something more. Trenton would often stay at Lathem’s luxury high-rise apartment.

According to Lathem, they had an open relationship, experimenting in the bedroom with other partners and enjoying “chemsex” – having sex while under the influence of disinhibiting drugs, like methamphetamine.

On 27 July 2017, the front desk at Lathem’s apartment building got an anonymous call saying a crime had been committed in his apartment. The police were called and entered using a master key.

Officers found Trenton lying face-down in a pool of blood with knife wounds in his back. An autopsy would reveal he had been stabbed over 70 times. A cut to the neck was so deep it had almost decapitated him.

Blood-stained knives were found at the scene – two kitchen knives, one of them broken because of the force used, and a drywall knife. There was no sign of Lathem and he was named as the prime suspect in Trenton’s death.

Investigators soon discovered that Lathem had been talking online with a British man called Andrew Warren – a financial officer at Oxford University’s Somerville College. The pair had been flirting online for months but as well as talking about their sexual fantasies, they had discussed committing suicide together. Lathem had then paid for Warren to fly from the UK to Chicago. Were they on the run together?

8-DAY, 2,000-MILE MANHUNT

As Lathem was hunted down, he was fired from his job. His parents contacted the police to say he had sent them an email, which included a video of himself. He could be heard talking about Trenton, saying, “He trusted me and felt safe with me, and I betrayed that... I took that all away when I killed him.”

Police started to track down Lathem and Warren. They had made an anonymous cash donation of $5,610 in Trenton’s name at the Howard Brown Health Center in Chicago, then continued to drive across the country. In Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, they made another donation of $1,000 in Trenton’s name at a public library.

After an eight-day manhunt covering 2,000 miles, the pair handed themselves in to authorities in California – and blamed each other for Trenton’s death.

Lathem claimed Warren had attacked and killed his boyfriend while he hid in the bathroom. But Warren said Lathem started the attack and he joined in by hitting Trenton over the head with a lamp and stabbing him twice.

In 2019, Warren, 61, made a plea deal. In exchange for testifying against Lathem, he would get 45 years in prison for first-degree murder.

“I want to say that I’m really so sorry,” he told Trenton’s family in court. But he would have plenty more to say when he took the stand at Lathem’s trial in 2021.

Meanwhile, with the start of the Covid pandemic, Lathem tried to persuade a judge to release him on a $1million bail so that his knowledge of microbiology could be used to fight the disease. The appeal was denied.

At the start of Lathem’s trial, the defence said the former professor and Trenton had engaged in “three-way sex with people they met online”, meth use during sex, and bondage and submission roleplay that involved knives.

They said Warren had joined the couple in the bedroom and then attacked them. Lathem admitted he’d hidden in the bathroom “like a coward” while the attack continued and said Trenton was dead when he came back out.

“He was at a loss as to what to do,” the defence told the court. “He felt responsible for putting Trent in harm’s way. He believed – and still believes to this day – he bears responsibility for Trent’s death. It was Dr Lathem, after all, who brought Andrew Warren into their lives.”

Victim Trenton was described as “trusting”

The killing took place in Lathem’s condo

Professor Latham told of the sexual thrill of the "feel of the knife on the body"

Warren thought he had flown to the US for a suicide pact

Latham took the stand to say that when Warren had arrived in Chicago, he was disappointed by his looks and felt "catfished".

But on the night of 26 July, he had engaged in a threesome with Warren and Trenton, during which they had brought knives into the bedroom for consensual role play. "No one is meant to get harmed," Latham testified. "One enjoys the use of the knife because it's a little bit scary, it requires trust and there's a range of sexual experiences that you can get by the feel of the knife on the body."

It was then, he said, Warren had attacked. The defence said he had killed Trenton out of jealousy.

The prosecution said Latham had orchestrated Trenton's death as part of a disturbing sexual fantasy and brought Warren in on the plan. Latham had plenty of time to get Trenton help but after the killing he had instead taken a shower and gone on the run with the man he accused of being a killer.

The prosecution said Latham had lured Warren to the US with a promise they would commit suicide together – but it was really so he could fulfil his fantasy of killing Trenton. Latham's blood was at the apartment and he'd confessed in the video to his parents.

METH-FUELLED THREESOME

Warren took the stand and said that the unexpected death of his father and other family problems had left him depressed, so he'd searched the internet for someone to kill him. He'd found Latham, who claimed he was suicidal because he'd lost out on a job.

He said they made a pact to kill each other but when he got to Chicago, they struggled to buy a gun. Then Latham revealed his true plan – he wanted them to kill Trenton together.

The horror had begun as a meth-fuelled threesome. Warren described how Latham started stabbing Trenton when he was asleep and as he fought back, Warren subdued him by hitting him with a heavy metal lamp.

Latham was found guilty of first-degree murder in October 2021 and sentenced this January to 53 years in prison. The judge said the murder was an "execution", adding, "To butcher Trenton Cornell, the way that he died, in order to fulfil a bizarre, antisocial, perverted fantasy based on whatever sense of reality, is beyond my understanding."

Trenton's family said he was trusting and loving, which made him a "perfect target for the murderer he fell in love with".

Latham, now 48, said in a statement, "I want Trent's family to know I have been grief-stricken since the moment everything happened."

But whatever grief he may feel over his actions, nothing had been more important to him than slaking his depraved lust – whatever the cost.

Frozen Planet II

8pm, BBC One

As temperatures rise at an unprecedented rate, our Poles are vanishing before our eyes.

In 2011, Frozen Planet gave viewers an insight into life in these regions, and now David Attenborough and the team are back with six new films showing what climate change means. Tonight's opener begins in the most hostile place on Earth – Antarctica. While emperor penguin chicks must find their own way across the treacherous sea ice, killer whales have learnt to generate their own waves, washing the seals off their ice floes.

Traveling north, we discover frozen habitats created by altitude. The greatest of these is the Himalaya – the tallest mountain range on Earth, and known as the 'third pole'. In its shadow lies a vast frozen grassy plain home to the Pallas's (or world's grumpiest) cat.

Ridley

8pm, ITV

Reviews have been mixed for this new drama which sees Adrian Dunbar star as a troubled ex-cop. Perhaps Line of Duty fans are just hoping the actor will be back as Ted Hastings some day soon. Ridley continues tonight as the former DI has a chance encounter with jazz singer Eve Marbury (Joanna Riding) and agrees to help find her missing brother.

Celebrity SAS: Who Dares Wins

9pm, Channel 4

The second week begins with the recruits jumping from a helicopter in pairs before trying to get to shore. When some of the group fail to keep their kit dry, they all have to endure a beasting. Next, they take the life of a teammate in their hands as one of them freefalls from a 150-foot cliff. Will Jennifer Ellison and Ferne McCann overcome their trust issues?

The Hobbit: An Unexpected Journey

Although not quite as riveting as his smash-hit Lord of the Rings trilogy, the first part of director Peter Jackson's fantasy franchise is still a spectacular ride. Nudged along by the wizard Gandalf (Ian McKellen), Bilbo Baggins (Martin Freeman) leaves the Shire to join a band of dwarves in their quest to reclaim the Kingdom of Erebor from the dragon Smaug.

Welcome to our Wordsearch with a difference. Not only are there 17 lost names hidden in the grid, written forwards, backwards, up, down or diagonally, but if you find them and cross them out, the letters that remain will spell out a further related name. As usual, we're not going to tell you what the lost names are, but they do all have a strong connection. The hidden name wears white but he is far from innocent – and that's a clue!

ANSWERS: The lost names are ALIEN, BEGGIE, BILL SIKES, DRACULA, DR NO, FAGIN, GOLDFINGER, GOLLUM, HAL, KEYSER SOZE, KLEBB, LARGO, MORIARTY, MR BLONDE, ORLOV, SAURON, SCAR, all movie villains. The hidden name is SARUMAN.

WORDWHEEL

Using only the letters in the wordwheel, take 10 minutes to find as many words as possible, none of which may be plurals, foreign words or proper nouns. Each word must contain the central letter and at least three others. Letters can only be used once in every word. There is at least one nine-letter word in the wheel.

Second Hand for 50 Grand

10pm, Channel 4

Times are hard, even for the collectors of luxury items. And that's where Xupes comes in – they are one of the leading firms in tracking down the goods of our dreams.

Last week, we were introduced to boss Joe McKenzie, as well as head of handbags Reece and watchmaker Megan as they went about their business sourcing high-end pre-owned goods for their clients. In tonight's edition, fashion model Amy Neville wants a luxury bag to celebrate her daughter's birth.

Meanwhile, young boxer John Hedges has won his first four professional bouts and, if he wins the next one, he's going to treat himself to that classic boxer's accessory – a tasty timepiece. Joe finds a watch that was once owned by a member of the SAS. Surely such a unique piece will fetch a good price?

EastEnders

7.30pm, BBC One

What's the chance of Phil and Kat making it down the aisle like a normal couple? If previous weddings in soapland are anything to go by, we'd say very slim indeed. Sharon tries to win the groom back by saying they were good together – some people have short memories. Then, Kat is in for a shock of her own when a face from the past reappears.

Question Team

10pm, Dave

Richard Ayoade returns with a second run of the comedy panel show. As before, three comedians bring along a unique round of questions, inspired by their own interests, for the host and the others to play. The sole stipulation is that the questions have proper answers. Tonight's guests are Jo Brand, Thanyia Moore, Josh Pugh and special guest Bill Bailey – who will be victorious?

The Great British Bake Off

8pm, Channel 4

Noel Fielding and Matt Lucas are back, ready to welcome 12 new bakers into the tent.

As is traditional, we're starting off with Cake Week, and a Signature challenge that involves 12 mini treats. It may be the first week, but judges Paul Hollywood and Prue Leith don't always make allowances for nerves.

It seems they are easing the class of 2022 in gently when it comes to the Technical though – it's a sponge they should be familiar with. Don't get used to it, bakers – they only get more obscure as the weeks go on.

Then it's time for a Showstopper that should demonstrate their architectural skills as well as their baking know-how as they make a replica of a house they love using cake. Sadly though, at the end of it one of them will be going back to their real home.

Married At First Sight UK

9pm, E4

It's time for a second dinner party, and it looks like it could be an uncomfortable evening for at least two of the grooms as they arrive without their brides. Just to make everything a little more awkward, there's also an Honesty Box Challenge, which leaves one bride fuming – and she's determined to let all the other guests know about it.

Rosie Jones' Trip Hazard

10.30pm, Channel 4

For her latest mini-break, Rosie heads to Northampton, ready to take on a 418ft abseil challenge. The only problem is her travelling companion, rapper Lady Leshurr, is afraid of heights. Luckily, Rosie is planning to build up to the abseil with a trip in a microlight and a lesson in zero-gravity yoga, as well as some earthbound traditional Scottish dancing in Corby.

Raiders of the Lost Ark

9pm, Film4

A fifth Indiana Jones film is due for release next year, but here's a chance to see Harrison Ford's debut as the intrepid archaeologist in Steven Spielberg hugely enjoyable action adventure. It finds Indy trying to track down the fabled Ark of the Covenant before the Nazis can get their hands on it, but he's going to need help from an old flame (Karen Allen).

Picks of the day

Shetland

9pm, BBC One

It's already been announced that this is Douglas Henshall's final series and that a new lead will be taking over for the next run. What we don't know though is how DI Jimmy Perez will be leaving, so tonight's concluding episode should be especially tense.

Even without the cop's departure, there's still the little matter of finding a killer and preventing a disaster from striking Lerwick.

The murderer certainly feels the net closing in, which makes them even more desperate and likely to do something reckless.

However, as new information emerges it begins to seem that not all of the events of the past few weeks are connected – which puts the spotlight on a new suspect.

So, Perez will have his work cut out tying up all those loose ends before he goes...

Mary Berry – Cook & Share

8pm, BBC Two

Bristol has a special place in Mary Berry's heart – it's where she got her first job, where her late son went to university and is currently home to her granddaughter. Now, she is rediscovering the city, calling in at a Michelin-starred restaurant with a 20-course tasting menu. She also does her own cooking, whipping up shakshuka and a pear and blueberry galette.

Doc Martin

9pm, ITV

The Portwenn Surgery is open again, but things are running far from smoothly – not only are Martin and Louisa both working there, but new receptionist Max is still learning the ropes, and James keeps bringing in a stray dog. The family could get more space when Louisa learns her dream house is on the market, but Joe is starting to wonder if the property is haunted.

Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom

9pm, Film4

It may be the weakest of the original Indiana Jones trilogy, but this second film (which is technically a prequel) is still a lot of fun. This time around, the archaeologist is in India to track down magical sacred stones. That means dealing with an evil cult, as well as a child sidekick (Ke Huy Quan) and an annoying nightclub singer (Kate Capshaw).

The National Television Awards 2022

8pm, ITV

Not content with taking charge of Saturday night's The Masked Dancer, Joel Dommett is also hosting this star-studded shindig, which is being beamed live into your living rooms from London's Wembley Arena. Robbie Williams is set to open the event too by performing a medley of his hits.

If your personal favourite actor, presenter or programme doesn't bag a trophy, then you only have yourself to blame – each award is voted for by the public, rather than industry executives and so-called experts.

Among the shows expected to do well are Netflix's Heartstopper, prison drama Time, and NHS saga This is Going to Hurt, as well as the comedies After Life and Derry Girls. As for stars, don't bet against Vicky McClure or Cillian Murphy taking home a trophy.

All Creatures Great and Small

9pm, Channel 5

The third series of the gentle rural drama set in Yorkshire during the 1930s is here at last – but there's change in the air. Having fully qualified as a vet, Tristan can now take on extra duties, while Siegfried makes James a partner – although the responsibility places him under pressure. What's more, a war in Europe is looming on the horizon.

Stuck

10pm, BBC Two

Dylan Moran's dark comedy continues with another double-bill. It begins as Dan appears to be suffering a mid-life crisis – he suddenly becomes self-conscious so decides to spruce himself up with some new clothes. Unfortunately, a meeting with Carla's old flame makes him feel even worse. Later, the cracks in his relationship with Carla grow ever wider.

The Elephant Man

9pm, BBC Four

David Lynch's sublime drama is based on the true story of John Merrick, played here by an unrecognisable John Hurt. Anthony Hopkins is on top form as Victorian surgeon Frederick Treves, who takes the disfigured Merrick under his wing, offering him a safe place to stay. A friendship develops that changes both their lives. John Gielgud and Freddie Jones also star.

Professor T

9pm, ITV

Fancy something a little quirky but with some bite? Then this crime drama might just fit the bill. Inspired by a Belgian TV series of the same name, the first series aired last year to great acclaim, thanks in no small to a wonderfully eccentric central performance from Ben Miller as Professor Jasper Tempest.

The actor is back for a second six-part run, in which the genius criminologist continues to help the Cambridge police force solve puzzling cases – something which brings him back into contact with his old flame DCI Brand (Juliet Aubrey).

This time, Jasper and his overbearing mother Adelaide (Frances de la Tour) are set to undergo therapy, during which we'll learn more about their troubled past. But first, he has a mystery involving arson to solve.

Am I Being Unreasonable?

9.30pm, BBC One

Daisy May Cooper and Selin Hizli have joined forces for this comedy thriller. The duo have written all six episodes and also take the lead roles of Nic and Jen. Nic is a bored housewife with a dark secret, while Jen is the newcomer who shakes up her life. Their friendship may also inspire Nic to reveal what she's done...

Mock the Week

10pm, BBC Two

Last month, the BBC made the shocking announcement that it was pulling the plug on this satirical comedy panel show, which means that the new run, its 21st series, will also be its last. Dara O Briain once again takes charge of proceedings and will be joined by regular Hugh Dennis. The first episode also features Rhys James, Maisie Adam and Dara's old mate Ed Byrne.

Braveheart

10.40pm, BBC One

Mel Gibson's historical epic (which plays fast and loose with the facts) won four Oscars, including Best Picture and Best Director (for Gibson himself). He takes the lead role of 13th-century Scottish hero William Wallace, focusing on his battle with the nation's English oppressors. But it's Patrick McGoohan who almost steals the show as the villainous King Edward I.
